PREFACE.

In issuing to the Public the Sixth volume of the New Series, I wish to offer my cordial thanks to all who have so kindly given me their assistance in bringing it to a successful termination. It is to the exertions of the Contributors that we are indebted for a volume containing much valuable information, and to them I especially tender my thanks, not only for their Communications, but also for the genial spirit in which they have come forward to help me on my undertaking the responsible post of Editor of so popular a magazine as the GENEALOGIST. Having been met on all sides in a way I had hardly dared to expect, I look forward to the commencement of the next volume with feelings of confidence for the future.

The mention of the next volume brings me to an announcement which I am sure will be received as good news by all my readers, namely, that Mr. Walter C. Metcalfe is very kindly contributing another Visitation of an important County, which will appear as soon as possible. It is perhaps unnecessary to remind the supporters of the GENEALOGIST that its existence depends to a great extent on the number of papers sent in for selection, but I wish it to be understood that any communication received by me shall, if desired, be returned to the author should it be unsuitable for this periodical.

Before concluding I must refer once more to the Complete Peerage, and a more appropriate opportunity could not present itself. That the action taken by G. E. C. and the Proprietors of this Magazine was for the benefit of the Public, is clearly proved by the fact that there is now every prospect of the entire work being issued at an early date, an expectation that could not have been realised had it been still continued in our pages.

INTRODUCTION.

It is with the most profound grief that I take up my pen to announce the death of our late popular Editor, Mr. Walford Dakin Selby, of H.M. Public Record Office, who died at his residence, 9, Clyde Street, S.W., on the 3rd instant, at the early age of forty-five years, and was buried at Kensal Green Cemetery on the 8th. As my readers may remember, Mr. Selby was seized with a severe attack of typhoid fever, as far back as November last, and for weeks lay suspended between life and death; although our late dear friend succeeded in battling the common enemy of humanity, in so far as he managed to rise from his bed of sickness and go about his work again, yet it was evident to all his old friends, that the struggle had been severe, and the victory incomplete. Our once bright, genial, intelligent friend had come out of the battle a broken man. It is impossible, owing to the pressure of time, to enlarge upon our sad loss in this number, but we shall hope in the October issue to give an obituary notice, setting forth fully all the services rendered both to Literature and the public service by our late friend.

It is a matter to be deplored, that I have to commence my editorial duties with an apology, but such is due to all my readers for the delay in getting out this number; it is not necessary that I should trouble them with all the circumstances of the situation which have brought about this delay.

I have also to announce that our learned and estimable Historian, G. E. C., has determined to discontinue issuing his "Complete Peerage" in this periodical. Although lamenting this fact I think he has adopted the wisest course, as we may now hope that the work in its entirety may soon be in the hands of the public.

In place of the Peerage I propose to devote the sixteen pages hitherto given to it to printing the complete Parish Register of the large and interesting parish of Bermondsey, co. Surrey, which will commence with the next number. This, as in the case of the Peerage, will have a separate pagination from the body of the magazine.

It is hard "to follow in the footsteps of the great," and this is certainly my position; but I sincerely crave your kind indulgence to give me a fair trial, and hopefully look forward to the day when I, now a comparative stranger, shall be welcomed by you all as an old friend.

It is with the most profound grief that I take up my pen to announce the death of our late popular Editor, Mr. Walford Dalziel Scully, of H.M. The Genealogist.

THE RIDDELLS OF THAT ILK, AND THE RIDELS OF BLAYE, CRANSTON-RIDEL, AND WITERING, DISTINCT FAMILIES.

By JOSEPH BAIN, F.S.A., Scot.

In the current volume of the Archæologia Æliana (xii, p. 192), there is a very interesting notice of the three Papal bulls, by which Adrian IV confirmed a family arrangement by the head of the Roxburghshire de Rydales, soon after the middle of the 12th century, which the author (Mr. Bates) truly says is probably a unique instance in Scotch conveyancing. And one is glad to hear that, though dissevered from the domain to which they relate, these documents are in the hands of the learned representative of the family. But the author of the paper goes into the question of the origin of the Roxburgh Riddells, and in his remarks, shews that he has either not availed himself of, or disregards certain sources of information, part of which has been in print for nearly ten years[1], which would have prevented his falling into the belief that the "Ridels" and "de Rydales," who appear almost simultaneously in Scotland, were the same family. The evidence of the surname alone goes for the other way. I may refer to a paper which appeared in Notes and Queries on 9th August, 1879[2], where all the information I then had was set down, to shew the separate origin of these two old families—that the Ridels came from Gascony, or the south-west quarter of France; the de Rydales from Yorkshire. I have nowhere seen any answer to the statements in that paper, which indeed being taken from original records, are unanswerable. And they are confirmed in every point by what I have since seen in the public records. The Ridels of Cranston-Ridel in Lothian, and Wytering in Northampton, and the de Rydales of Lillesclive in Roxburgh, were undoubtedly distinct aborigines. The former family never prefixed "de" to their surname, which was a personal one; the latter invariably did so because they came from a place so called. The first Ridel of Cranston was probably Gervasius Ridel, who appears in the Inquisicio of Earl David in A.D. 1116, and it remained with his successors till the reign of Edward III, with more or less interruption during the wars of independence. As the family, on account of their Northampton estate, mostly sided with England, they finally lost Cranston, and retired to Northamptonshire, ending in female succession in the reign of Edward IV.[3] The first of the Riddells of that Ilk, was Walter de Ridale (not "Walter Ridel" as Mr. Bates calls him) who received Lillesclive, &c., from David I. (1123-1153). The arms of these two

THE RIDDELLS OF THAT ILK, AND THE RIDDELS OF HAYE, GRANSTON-RIDDEL, AND WITHELEIG, DISTINCT FAMILIES.

By JOSEPH BAIN, F.S.A., Scot.

In the current volume of the Archæologia Æliana (xii, p. 192), there is a very interesting notice of the three Fagel halls, by which Adrian IV combined a family arrangement by the head of the Roxburghshire de Ryddels, soon after the middle of the 12th century, which the author (Mr. Bates) truly says is probably a unique instance in Scotch conveyancing. And so it is glad to hear that, though disserved from the domain to which they relate, these documents are in the hands of the learned representative of the family. But the author of the paper goes into the question of the origin of the Roxburgh Riddells, and in his remarks, shews that he has either not availed himself of, or disregarded certain sources of information, part of which has been in print for nearly ten years, which would have prevented his falling into the belief that the "Riddels" and "de Rydales," who appear almost simultaneously in Scotland, were the same family. The evidence of the surname alone goes for the other way. I may refer to a paper which appeared in Notes and Queries on 9th August, 1879, where all the information I then had was set down, to show the separate origin of these two old families—that the Riddels came from Gaseony, or the south-west quarter of France; the de Rydales from Yorkshire. I have nowhere seen any answer to the statements in that paper, which indeed being taken from original records, are unanswerable. And they are confirmed in every point by what I have since seen in the public records. The Riddels of Cranston-Riddel in Lothian, and Wytenaig in Northumpton, and the de Rydales of Lillesclive in Roxburgh, were undoubtedly distinct families. The former family never prefixed "de" to their surname, which was a personal one; the latter invariably did so because they came from a place so called. The first Riddel of Cranston was probably Gervasius Riddel, who appears in the Inquiries of Earl David in A.D. 1116, and it remained with his successors till the reign of Edward III, with more or less interruption during the wars of independence. As the family, on account of their Northumpton estate, mostly sided with England, they finally lost Cranston, and retired to Northumpteshire, ending in female succession in the reign of Edward IV.[1] The first of the Riddells of that Ilk, was Walter de Riddale (not "Walter Riddel" as Mr. Bates calls him) who received Lillesclive, &c., from David I. (1129-1153). The arms of these two families were essentially different. On the seal of Sir Hugh Ridel (of Cranston) appended to his homage to Edward I. in 1296, which is in the Public Record Office, the charges are a plain chief, and a pile (?) in base, although it is somewhat damaged, and besides is on rather a small scale. The arms of the Riddells of Riddell, a chevron between three ears of rye, evidently refer to the old form of their surname, "Rydale," and may thus be called arma cantantia. Some variations of them will be found in Mr. Stodart's Scottish Arms, where, however, the earliest occurrence of the arms is not (I think) given. But if Mr. Bates will look at the 2nd and 3rd volumes of the Calendar of Documents relative to Godland (1272-1357) he will see reason to modify his views as to the identity of the Ridels and de Ridales. What I have ventured to say in the Preface to vol. ii, p. lxii, is confirmed by any documents that I have since seen in the public records.

After consulting these records, it will not "be safe to assume" that Walter de Ridale (not Ridel) and Gervasius Ridel were brothers, or that Geoffry Ridel, the Archdeacon of Canterbury (C. 1164) was "connected with the lords of Lillesclive." Though Mr. Bates notices Thomas de Ridell, a Berwick burgess, whose will appears in the Durham Record in January, 1358-59,[1] he does not mention Philip de Ridale, an earlier Berwick burgess—Mayor of Berwick in fact—who appears on the Ragman Roll in 1291, and must have been a man of wealth. Sir William Rydel (or Ridel) appears in Northumberland from 1301 to 1330, evidently a distinguished person. His seal is given in vol. iii of the Sc. Calendar, as a lion rampant within an engrailed bordure—thus different from the arms of the other families.[2]

It is curious that unless "John of Lillesclive" was a Riddel, of Roxburghshire, no one of that family appears on the Ragman Roll, not indeed during the Wars of Succession—with a trifling exception, a Michael Ridel a juror on a Roxburgh inquisition. The Ridels of Cranston-Ridel alone appear during that period. This is rather remarkable considering the position of the Riddells of that Ilk on the most debateable part of the Eastern marches, which was the subject of contention between the countries long after Scotland recovered its independence. I notice that the account of the Riddells of that Ilk in Burke perpetuates the fallacy that Gervase Ridel and Walter de Ridale were closely related. The greatest genealogist of his day—John Riddell—a cadet of that Ilk—knew quite well that the stocks were different, or, as he styled it, "double," though he did not emphasize the fact so clearly as he would have done in the case of another family.

Mr. Bates concludes his paper by referring to what he calls the "monstrous fabrication" of the genealogy of the Riddells of Ardnamurchan.[3] Though this work was published in 1794, I had never consulted it, or seen the pedigree in question. But I have now done so, and on a fair consideration of its details, he must allow me

[1] Surtees Society Wills, vol. i, p. 28. Thomas Riddel probably his son appears also in the records. (Col. of Doctor Scotland, vol. iv).

[2] The lineage of this Knight is given in Hutchinson's Durham, vol. iii., in the Ardnamurchan pedigree to be afterwards noticed, and is supported by the records. Hugh Ridel was his executor according to the same authority, corroborated by vol. iii of the Cal. of Scots Documents.

families were essentially different. On the seal of Sir Hugh Riddel (of Cranston) appended to his homage to Edward I. in 1296, which is in the Public Record Office, the charges are a plain chief, and a pile (?) in base, although it is somewhat damaged, and besides is on rather a small scale. The arms of the Riddells of Riddell, a chevron between three ears of rye, evidently refer to the old form of their surname, "Rydale," and may thus be called arms contextual. Some variations of them will be found in Mr. Brodart's Scottish Arms, where, however, the modern coarseness of the arms is not (I think) given. But if Mr. Bates will look at the 2nd and 3rd volumes of the Oldenbarnes-Oldenbarnes-relative to Cadland (1873-1887) he will see reason to modify his views as to the identity of the Riddels and de Riddales. What I have ventured to say in the Proceedings in vol. ii. p. lxii. is confirmed by any documents that I have since seen in the public records.

After consulting those records, it will not "be safe to assume" that Walter de Riddale (not Riddel) and Gervasius Riddel were brothers, or that Geoffry Riddel, the Archdeacon of Canterbury (C. 1164) was "connected with the lords of Riddalesive." Though Mr. Bates notices Thomas de Riddell, a Berwick burgess, whose will appears in the Durham Record in January, 1358-59,[1] he does not mention Philip de Riddale, an earlier Berwick burgess—Mayor of Berwick in fact—who appears on the Ragman Roll in 1291, and must have been a man of wealth. Sir William Ridel (or Riddel) appears in Northumberland from 1361 to 1380, evidently a distinguished person. His seal is given in vol. iii. of the Soc. Calendar, as a lion rampant within an engrailed bordure—thus different from the arms of the other families.[2]

It is curious that unless "John of Riddalesive" was a Riddel, of Roxburghshire, no one of that family appears on the Ragman Roll, nor indeed during the Wars of Succession—with a trifling exception, a Michael Ridel a juror on a Roxburgh inquisition. The Riddels of Cranston-Ridel alone appear during that period. This is rather remarkable considering the position of the Riddells of that Ilk on the most debatable part of the Eastern marches, which was the subject of contention between the countries long after Scotland recovered its independence. I notice that the account of the Riddells of that Ilk in Burke perpetuates the fallacy that Gervase Ridel and Walter de Riddale were closely related. The greatest genealogist of his day—John Riddell—a cadet of that Ilk—knew quite well that the stocks were different, or, as he styled it, "double," though he did not emphasize the fact so clearly as he would have done in the case of another family.

Mr. Bates concludes his paper by referring to what he calls the "monstrous fabrication" of the genealogy of the Riddells of Ardnamurchan.[3] Though this work was published in 1791, I had never consulted it, or seen the pedigree in question. But I have now done so, and on a fair consideration of its details, he must allow me to say that his unqualified condemnation of it, is not borne out by such parts of it as I have been able to test by reference to authorities. It deals with thirty generations, beginning with the Counts of Angoulême and Perigord, and ending with Sir James Riddell of Ardnamurchan and Sunart, Baronet, in 1794. I will not undertake to say anything as to the truth or falsity of the first seven generations, but beginning with the 8th of the lineage, Galfredus Ridel of Blaye, said to be the first who used that surname in A.D. 1048, down to the 22nd Henry Ridel of Witering, who died in 1471, and was the last of the principal Northampton Ridels, the accounts given in this pedigree are in a great measure substantially borne out by the Scotch and English historical records. Whoever drew up the pedigree for Sir James Riddell had evidently consulted original authorities, and these fifteen generations unquestionably deal with real persons, and contain a solid basis of fact. There are, of course, errors in dates and minor points, but the writer was one evidently well versed in the connections of the Ridels, Rydels, or Rudels, of Blaye, in Guienne, the chief continental seat of the family, as also with their English and Scotch possessions. He also draws attention to what he calls "the singular error made by some Scotch 'Genealogist,' in confusing the two families of Ridel and de Rydale, and points out the fact of the latter having come from Yorkshire. This independent testimony, hitherto quite unknown to me, is confirmed in all substantial points by my own researches on Scotch historical questions in the English records, not at all with particular reference to this family. Whether the Ardnamurchan descent from a younger branch of the Ridels of Witering is correct or not, I have no means of ascertaining, but seeing that the earlier part of their lineage is so correctly given, there is no antecedent reason why the latter part may not be correct also, if the authorities for it are sound.

[1] Surtees Society Wills, vol. i. p. 25. Thomas Riddel probably his son, appears also in the records. (Col. of Scots. Scotland, vol. ix).

[2] The lineage of this Knight is given in Hutchinson's Durham, vol. iii., in the Aldenbarnes pedigree to be afterwards noticed, and is supported by the records. Hugh Ridel was his ancestor according to the same authority, corroborated by vol. iii of the Cal. of Scots. Scotland.

[3] In Hutchinson's Durham, vol. iii. Riddells.

However this may be, it does not affect the proposition which I venture to maintain, that the "Ridels" and the "de Ridales" were originally distinct families—the former from the south-west of France, the latter from Rydale in Yorkshire.

The question being of some interest as touching Scottish records, and having been raised in a publication of standing such as the Archæologia Æliana, anyone who has some acquaintance with the above records is at liberty to state the case, as it is made out from these, and traverse the conclusions of the learned Newcastle antiquary.

Mr. Bates raises another question of some interest. The third of the Papal bulls names a place called "Brahebi" as held by Walter de Ridale and his ancestors under Hexham Abbey. He says there is no such place now known by that name in Roxburgh—but assuming it to be in Scotland, "it is the sole trace of that Church having owned estates on the north side of the Tweed." But I would ask what authority is there for this conjecture? There is not a single place in Scotland named among the possessions of Hexham, confirmed to the Abbey by Edward I in 1305, by a charter printed in Dugdale. It is not conceivable that, if they had held any lands in Scotland, they would have been left out of that charter. It is therefore more likely to be some place on the English side of the March that has changed its name.

to say that his unqualified condemnation of it, is not borne out by such parts of it as I have been able to test by reference to authorities. It deals with thirty generations, beginning with the Counts of Angoulême and Perigord, and ending with Sir James Riddell of Adinstanesban and Bunsar, Baronet, in 1791. I will not undertake to say anything as to the truth or falsity of the first seven generations, but beginning with the 8th of the lineage, Gulielmus Ridel of Hilgy, said to be the first who used that surname in A.D. 1013, down to the 22nd Henry Ridel of Witering, who died in 1471, and was the last of the principal Northumberland Ridels, the accounts given in this pedigree are in a great measure substantially borne out by the Scotch and English historical records. Whoever drew up the pedigree for Sir James Riddell had evidently consulted original authorities, and these fifteen generations unquestionably deal with real persons, and contain a solid basis of fact. There are, of course, errors in dates and minor points, but the writer was one, evidently well versed in the connections of the Ridels, Rydels, or Radels, of Hilgy, in Guienne, the chief continental seat of the family, as also with their English and Scotch possessions. He also draws attention to what he calls "the singular error made by some Scotch Genealogist," in confusing the two families of Ridel and de Rydale, and points out the fact of the latter having come from Yorkshire. THE WHITMORES OF LUDSON, CO. SALOP.

Communicated by WILLIAM H. WHITMORE.

In past years I have had the advantage of having genealogical searches made for me in England by the late H. G. Somerby and the late Col. Joseph L. Chester, both acknowledged authorities. To the pages of the "Herald and Genealogist," I contributed a portion of the results in the following articles:—An account of the Whitmores of Staffordshire and Cheshire (iv, 20); Note on the effigy of Sir John W. (iv, 340); On a line of the family at Madely, Staff. (iv, 398); A note on Gen. Edward Whitmore (v, 681); on Penelope Wells (v, 683); on the Fairfax family (vii, 161); On the Whitmores of the Haywood, co. Hereford (vii, 364 and viii, 176); On the Whitmores of Caunton, co. Notts (vi, 523); and on the Roos family (vii, 535).

In these notes I refrained from repeating information easily accessible, from Burke's publications or similar sources, especially in the case of the family of Whitmore settled in Shropshire for the last two centuries. I had, however, obtained some special information in regard to collateral branches, and a recent curious accident has recalled these facts to mind. A friend recently bought a number of old deeds and similar papers, sent to this country as waste-paper stock, and among them he found an indenture of Thomas Whitmore, of Ludson, co. Salop, dated 1730, which clearly showed the date of the extinction of the name in that locality. As I had notes on the previous generations, this remarkable preservation of the deed and its fortuitous guidance to my hands, seem a good reason for placing the whole history before the readers of the "Genealogist."

The Visitation of Shropshire in 1663 (according to an extract certified by H. Murray Lane, Esq., Bluemantle) records that Richard[1] Whitmore of Claverley, had sons Thomas[2] and Richard.[2] This latter name is a mistake for William,[2] a merchant of London, father of Sir William[3] and Sir George,[3] Lord Mayor.

Thomas[2] Whitmore is recorded as having a son John[3] of Ludson, father of Thomas,[4] William[4] and John[4] and three daughters. The third son, John[4] had a son John,[5] aged 22, 14 Aug., 1663, Thomas,[5] William[5] and George[5] and four daughters. Here the information supplied by the Visitation ends.

At my request, however, Col. Chester copied all the Whitmore entries from the records at Claverley, from 1568 down to 1800, and the Rev.

THE WHITMORES OF LUDSON, CO. SALOP.

Communicated by WILLIAM R. WHITMORE.

In past years I have had the advantage of having genealogical searches made for me in England by the late H. G. Somerby and the late Col. Joseph L. Chester, both acknowledged authorities. To the pages of the "Herald and Genealogist," I contributed a portion of the results in the following articles:—An account of the Whitmores of Staffordshire and Cheshire (iv, 20); Note on the ancestry of Sir John W. (iv, 340); On a line of the family at Maelely, Salop (iv, 398); A note on Gen. Edward Whitmore (v, 681); on Penelope Wells (v, 683); on the Fairfax family (vii, 161); On the Whitmores of the Haywood, co. Hereford (vii, 364 and viii, 176); On the Whitmores of Cumdon, co. Notts (vi, 323); and on the Rose family (vii, 335).

In these notes I retained from repeating information easily accessible, from Burke's publications or similar sources, especially in the case of the family of Whitmore settled in Shropshire for the last two centuries. I had, however, obtained some special information in regard to collateral branches, and a recent curious incident has recalled these facts to mind. A friend recently bought a number of old deeds and similar papers, sent to this country as waste-paper stock, and among them he found an indenture of Thomas Whitmore, of Ludson, co. Salop, dated 1730, which clearly showed the date of the extinction of the name in that locality. As I had notes on the previous generations, this remarkable preservation of the deed and its fortuitous guidance to my hands, seem a good reason for piecing the whole history before the readers of the "Genealogist."

The Visitation of Shropshire in 1623 (according to an extract certified by H. Murray Lane, Esq., Bluemantle) records that Richard[1] Whitmore of Claverley, had sons Thomas[2] and Richard.[2] This latter name is a mistake for William,[2] a merchant of London, father of Sir William[3] and Sir George,[3] Lord Mayor.

Thomas[2] Whitmore is recorded as having a son John[3] of Ludson, father of Thomas,[4] William[4] and John[4] and three daughters. The third son, John[4] had a son John,[5] aged 22, 14 Aug. 1623, Thomas,[5] William[5] and George[5] and four daughters. Here the information supplied by the Visitation ends.

At my request, however, Col. Chester copied all the Whitmore entries from the records at Claverley, from 1583 down to 1800, and the Rev.

George Whitmore, Rector of Stockton, in 1872, kindly sent me all similar entries on his records from 1607 to 1820. From these sources and others duly cited, I have prepared a more complete pedigree, beginning with Richard[1] Whitmore of Claverly, who died in 1549 and was father of Thomas[2] Whitmore, younger brother of William[2] of London, who had probably two wives, one of them being termed in the Visitation, "—— Bowdlear."

By his wife, ——, he had baptized at Claverley, co. Salop, i——[3], 18 Mch., 1568-9; buried prob. as Joan, 27 Oct., 1600.

His wife Jane was buried there 19 Aug., 1571. He had baptized afterwards there, of course by a second wife, ii John,[3] 26 Oct., 1572.

iii William,[3] 26 Jany., 1575-6; bu. 21 Feb., 1576-7.
iv Joyce,[3] 14 Apr., 1577.

Thomas[2] Whitmore was buried at Claverley, 17 Jany., 1577-8, and July 23, 1580, Dynes (Dionis?) Whitmore, widow, was buried: presumably his second wife.

Third Generation.

His only son John[3] Whitmore, termed of Ludson in Claverley, married (according to the Visitation of 1663) Frances, dau. of Will. Billingsley of Astley, co. Salop. John had baptized at Claverley:

i Thomas,[4] 12 Feb., 1598-9.
ii Elizabeth,[4] 1 Jany., 1599—1600; bu. 26 Jany. in the same year.
iii Jane,[4] 14 June, 1602; m. William Warham at C., 12 June, 1627.
iv William,[4] 4 Sept., 1603.
v Elizabeth,[4] 8 Dec., 1605; m. Wm. Duckett, of Gray's Inn (Visit.)
vi Frances,[4] 15 Nov., 1607.
vii Joan,[4] 5 May, 1609.
viii John,[4] 25 Aug., 1611.
ix Mary,[4] 27 Mch., 1614; m. John Gop of Varfield, co. Worc. (Visit.)
x Anne,[4] 15 Apr., 1624; m. Thomas Atkinson of Stanton-Lacy (Visit.)

At Claverley were buried, 20 June 1649, John Whitmore, gent., and 3 Feb., 1668-9, Mrs. Frances Whitmore; evidently the parents of these children.

The three sons all lived to be of age; Thomas was of Claverley and a Bencher of the Middle Temple, London; William was probably a draper of London, and afterwards of Shipley, co. Salop; John, D.D., was Rector of Stockton.

Fourth Generation.

Thomas[4] Whitmore, eldest son, married (according to the Visitation,) Anne, dau. of Thomas Corbet of Longmore, co. Salop. He matriculated at Wadham Coll., Oxford, in 1615-16, aged 18. He is mentioned in the wills of his relatives Sir George Whitmore, Dame Mary W., his wife, William W., his son, and Sir Thomas W., his nephew. This Thomas Whitmore was evidently the agent and manager for his wealthy cousins. His will shows that he had no issue:—

George Whitmore, Rector of Stockton, in 1872, kindly sent me all similar entries on his records from 1607 to 1820. From these sources and others duly cited, I have prepared a more complete pedigree, beginning with Richard[1] Whitmore of Cleverly, who died in 1540 and was father of Thomas,[2] Whitmore, younger brother of William[2] of Longdon, who had probably two wives, one of them being termed in the Visitation, "—— Horwillan."

By his wife, ——, he had baptized at Cleverly, co. Salop, i ——[3], 18 Mch., 1538-9; buried prob. as Joan, 27 Oct. 1600.

His wife Jane was buried there 19 Aug., 1571. He had baptized afterwards there, of course by a second wife,

ii Jedin,[3] 26 Oct., 1572

iii William,[3] 26 Jany., 1575-6; bn. 21 Feb, 1576-7.

iv Joyce,[3] 14 Apr., 1577.

Thomas[2] Whitmore was buried at Cleverly, 17 Jany., 1577-8, and July 23, 1590, Dyrres (Dionis?) Whitmore, widow, was buried: presumably his second wife.

Third Generation.

His only son John[3] Whitmore, termed of Ludson in Cleverly, married (according to the Visitation of 1623) Frances, dau. of William Billingsley of Astley, co. Salop. John had baptized at Cleverly:

i Thomas,[4] 12 Feb, 1598-9.

ii Elizabeth,[4] 1 Jany., 1599—1600; bn. 20 Jany. in the same year.

iii Jane,[4] 14 June, 1602; m. William Warham at C., 12 June, 1627.

iv William,[4] 4 Sept., 1603.

v Elizabeth,[4] 8 Dec., 1604; m. Wm. Duckett, of Gray's Inn (Visit.)

vi Frances,[4] 13 Nov., 1607.

vii Joan,[4] 6 May, 1609.

viii John,[4] 25 Aug., 1611.

ix Mary,[4] 27 Mch, 1614; m. John Cop of Varfield, co. Worc. (Visit.)

x Anne,[4] 15 Apr., 1624; m. Thomas Atkinson of Stanton-Lacy (Visit.)

At Cleverly were buried, 20 June 1613, John Whitmore, gent., and 9 Feb, 1605-6, Mrs. Frances Whitmore; evidently the parents of these children.

The three sons all lived to be of age; Thomas was of Cleverly and a Member of the Middle Temple, London; William was probably a draper of London, and afterwards of Shipley, co. Salop; John, D.D., was Rector of Stockton.

Fourth Generation.

Thomas[4] Whitmore, eldest son, married (according to the Visitation) Anne, dau. of Thomas Corbet of Longnor, co. Salop. He matriculated at Wadham Coll., Oxford, in 1615-16, aged 18. He is mentioned in the wills of his relatives Sir George Whitmore, Dame Mary W., his wife, William W., his son, and Sir Thomas W., his nephew. This Thomas Whitmore was evidently the agent and manager for his wealthy cousins. His will shows that he had no issue:—

(Hale, 68.) Will of Thomas Whitmore of Ludston, co Salop, Esq. dated 7 Dec 1676, proved in P.P.C. 22 June 1677, "to poor of parish of Claverly where I was born £5 yearly for ever. To my wife I give my nephew John W. to be a son. Neice Anne Fletcher and John Gopp her brother. Neice Mrs. Margaret W. wife of John Whitmore. Thomas Janns of Albrighton. Nephew William Whitmore, his brother George W. and sister Mary W. Rings to Sir William Whitmore, bart. Sir Thomas Whitmore, K.B., Wm. Whitmore, Esq, Sarah Whitmore, widow, Mrs. Anne Powney, my sister, Elizabeth Duckett, Rose Turton, widow, Edward Finckes, nephews John Gopp and Wm. Warham. Thomas Janns dec^d. father of before-mentioned Thomas J. and John Farrington half brother of Thomas J. The six children of John Farrington of Ranton co Staff. gent. which he had by my late neice Elizabeth. Mary Etheridge and George E. her son, to have money left in my hands for the children of John Gopp dec^d.

At Claverley were buried, 16 May, 1677, Thomas Whitmore, Esq.; and 19 Dec., 1678, Mrs. Anne Whitmore, widow of Thomas Whitmore, Esq., late of Ludstone.

William[4] Whitmore is termed of Shipley in the Visitation, but he is undoubtedly the person called by Sir George Whitmore in his will, "my cousin William Whitmore, the Draper." He is also mentioned in Dame Mary W.'s will. He probably died in 1668 unmarried as his will indicates. The following is an abstract of it :—

(Hene 149) Will of William Whitmore of Shipley co Salop, Gent, dated 26 Dec 1667, proved in P.C.C. 25 Nov 1668. Nephew John Whitmore son of my dec^d. brother Dr. Whitmore. Sister Jane Wareham. Neice Anne Warham. Cousin John Farrington, and Elizabeth his wife, and Thomas Janns her son. Nephew Wm. Warham. Sister Mary Gopp and her five daus. Elizabeth, Ursula, Mary, Frances, and Sarah, and sons John Ichabod, and James Goff. Neice Anne Fletcher and her children. Sister-in-law Mrs. Atkinson. Nephews John and Francis Atkinson, neice Anne Atkinson. Mother Frances Whitmore. Sister Duckett. Brother Thomas Whitmore; sister Anne W. his wife, and her neice Rose Turton—various other bequests. Also to my kindred now living in Bridgnorth viz, John, William, Thomas and Launcelot Cheese and their sister. To my godson William Whitmore, one of the sons of my dec^d. brother Dr Whitmore my capital messuage &c in Shipley and also an ancient marlery, now a fish pond or pool, in Heathton, called Heathton Pool; remainder to his heirs male, remainder to my right heirs. Sister Jane Warham, nephew Wm. Warham. Residue to my nephew William Whitmore now about 10 years old.

The Rev. John[4] Whitmore, D.D. matriculated at Wadham Coll. Oxford, 30 Oct., 1620, aged 16, as the son of John W. pleb. of Ludstone, co. Salop. He is noted in Wood's Fasti ii, col. 259, "1661, Oct. 17, John Whitmore of Wadham Coll." among Doctors of Divinity. He became Rector of Stockton, co. Salop, in 1662, and, according to the Visitation, he married Anne, dau. of Thomas Martin of Wilcot co. Oxford. The same authority gives them the following children :—

i John[5] aged 23, Aug. 14, 1663.
ii Thomas[5] ; bu. at Stockton 3 Mch. 1666.
iii William[5] ; heir to his uncle Thomas W. in 1677.
iv George.[5]
v Elizabeth.[5]
vi Frances.[5]
vii Anne.[5]
viii Mary.[5]

The Rev. John Whitmore was buried at Stockton 10 July, 1666.

Fifth Generation.

John[5] Whitmore of Ludstone, eldest son of Rev. John,[4] seems to have married first, Margaret —— who probably died s.p. She was buried 17

(Hale, (p.) Will of Thomas Whitmore of Ludston, co Salop, Esq., dated 7 Dec 16[illegible] proved in P.C.C. 22 June 16[illegible], "by power of partial of Uxoresy where I was born 43 years for ever. At Claverley were buried, 16 May, 1677, Thomas Whitmore, Esq. and 19 Dec., 1678, Mrs. Anne Whitmore, widow of Thomas Whitmore Esq., late of Ludstone.

William[1] Whitmore is termed of Shipley in the Visitation, but he undoubtedly the person called by Sir George Whitmore in his will, "my cousin William Whitmore, the Draper." He is also mentioned Dame Mary W.'s will. He probably died in 1658 unmarried as his w indicates. The following is an abstract of it :—

(Hale 149) Will of William Whitmore of Shipley co Salop, Gent, dated 24 Dec 16[illegible] proved in P.C.C. 22 Nov 1658. Nephew John Whitmore son of my dear brother Whitmore. Sister Jane Warham. Nephews John and Francis Aldiboon, neice Anne Aldiboon. Mother Frances Whitmore. Sister Dockett. Brother Thomas Whitmore ; sister Anne W his wife, and her neice Rose Turton—various other bequests. Also to my kinsfolk now living in Eaglesworth co. John, William, Thomas and Lancelot Clopton and the elder. To my godson William Whitmore, one of the sons of my dear brother Whitmore my capital messuage &c in Shipley and also an ancient nursery, now a fo pond or pool, in Heaston, called Heaston Pool ; remainder to his heirs mal remainder to my right heirs. Sister Jane Warham, nephew Wm. Warham. Residue to my nephew William Whitmore now about 19 years old.

The Rev. John[4] Whitmore, D.D. matriculated at Wadham Col Oxford, 30 Oct., 1620, aged 16, as the son of John W. plebn. of Ludston co. Salop. He is noted in Wood's Fasti ii. col. 539, "1661, Oct. 17 John Whitmore of Wadham Coll." among Doctors of Divinity. He became Rector of Stockton, co. Salop, in 1662, and, according to the Visitation, he married Anne, dau. of Thomas Martin of Willcot co. Oxford The same authority gives them the following children :—

i John[5] aged 28, Aug. 14, 1663.
ii Thomas[5] ; bn. at Stockton 3 Mch. 1666.
iii William[5] ; heir to his uncle Thomas W. in 1677
iv George.[5]
v Elizabeth.[5]
vi Frances.[5]
vii Anne.[5]
viii Mary.[5]

The Rev. John Whitmore was buried at Stockton 10 July, 1666.

Fifth Generation.

John[5] Whitmore of Ludstone, eldest son of Rev. John,[4] seems to have married first, Margaret ——, who probably died s.p. She was buried 1

Sept. 1682, at Claverley. He married at Claverley 9 Apr. 1683, Sarah Acton, and I find by Kimber and Johnston's Baronetage, 1771, vol. i, p. 513, that she was the daughter of Thomas Acton of Gatacre Park, co. Salop. Their children were baptised at Claverley as follows :—

i Frances,[6] 25 Feb. 1683-4 (? m. Thomas Perrot 29 Oct. 1702.) ii William,[6] 27 Oct. 1685 ; d. 4 Jany. 1700.

xiii George,[6] 14 Feb. 1700-1.
xiv Richard,[6] 7 Feb. 1702-3 ; bu. at C. 4 Apr. 1727.*
xv Jane,[6] 18 May 1707.

John Whitmore, Esq., was buried at Claverley 5 Nov. 1715, and 21 June 1752 Mrs. Sarah Whitmore, widow. For good reasons, I think this was John's widow, though she must have attained a great age.

At Claverly were also buried George Whitmore, 4 May 1699 and William Whitmore, Gent., 11 Oct. 1700, whom I presume to be the brothers of this John[5] Whitmore. There was also a Mrs. Sarah W., widow, buried there April 13, 1700, whom I cannot identify. From Add. MSS., Brit. Mus., 21, 237, I learn that there are or were inscriptions at Claverley as follows :—

"Thomas Whitmore of Ludstone, Esq, ob. 26 May, 1677 aged 8-."
"John Whitmore of Ludstone, Esq, ob Nov. 2, 1715, aged 76."
"Margaret, ux. John Whitmore of Ludstone, Esq, ob. Sept. 17, 1682."
"Richard Whitmore, youngest son of John Whitmore, Esq, ob. March 31, 1727, aged 24."

THE WILL OF DR. JOHN DONNE, SOME TIME DEAN OF ST. PAUL'S.

[The following Will was copied for me more than thirty years ago, when I was engaged in researches into the life of the writer. I think it unnecessary to add any notes; it will be enough to refer to an article on Donne, which will be found in the fifteenth volume of the Dictionary of National Biography.

AUGUSTUS JESSOPP, D.D.]

(Extracted from the Registry of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury.)

All which Legacies beinge see payde and all charge that can in any wayes fall upon my Executors being disburged my Will is That my plate & bookes (such bookes only beinge excepted as by a Schedule annexed wch my hand I shall give aways) and all my other goods beinge praysde and soulde all my Poore Estate of money left & money soe raised & money lent maye be distributed in manner and forme following Firste I will that for the mayntenance of my dearly beloved Mother whome it hathe pleased God after a plentifull Fortune in her former tymes to bringe in decaye in her very olde age there be ymployed Five hundred poundes of wch my meaninge is not that the Propertye but only the proffite shoulde accrue to her during her n^r^all life and after her deathe the sayd Five hundred poundes to be divided amongste those my children wch shall be then alive And because there maye be some tyme before any proffitt of that monye will come to her handes my will is that Twenty poundes be payde unto her order and besydes the benefitte of the Five hundred pounds at the breakinge up of my familye & her removinge from thence Item my Will is that my childrens portions shoulde be equall yf they be unmarried at my deathe But if they be marryed before they are to content themselves wth that wch they shall have received from me at theire marriage Except I make some other declaration of my Will by a Codicill hereafter to be annexed my will neverthelesse is that my eldest daughter Constance Harvye whoe receyved from me at her firste marriadge but Fyve hundred poundes for portion shal be equall wth the rest whoe at my deathe are to receive portions thoughe theire portions amounte to noe more than Five hundred poundes. And therefore whereas there is at this tyme in my handes a conveighance of a certaine Farme calld the Tannhouse from her husband M^r^. Samuel Harvye in consideracon of Twoe hundred and fiftye poundes payde by me for his use in wch there is a Provisoe for redemption for a certaine tyme. My will is that if that Twoe hundred and fiftie poundes be accordinglie payde it be then added to the whole Stocke wch is to be devided amongste the children If for defaulte of payment it become absolutelie myne my will is that that land be reassured unto him and his heires wth this condicon & not oth^r^wise that it be added to her Joynture for hir lief if shee survive him and if it fall oute that this land be thus given backe whereby my Daughter received Twoe hundred and fiftie poundes above hir former Five hundred my will is that shee make noe clayme to any parte of my state by any thinge formerlye sayd in this my Will till all the rest of my children have received Seaven hundred & fiftie poundes because upon the whole matter shee hathe receyved soe muche yf I give backe that land But if by Gods goodnes theire portions come to more Then shee is alsoe to enter for an equall ꝑte of the surplus age as well in that wch returnes to the children after my mothers deathe as any othere waye In all wch accrues wch may come to my Daughter Harvye my will is that uppon receipt thereof her husband make a proportionable addicon to her Joynture in land or els that that monye wch shall soe accrue unto them maye come to the longer liver of them Item I give to my sonne George that Annuyte of Fortye pounds yearelie for the payment of wch my hono^r^able frend S^r^. John Davers of Chelsey Knighte hathe some yeares since accepted from me Firste Twoe hundred poundes and after One hundred marcks of wch Annuytye thoughe there be as yett noe assurance made yett there remayne wth me Bondes for those sevrall sommes And S^r^. John Davers will uppon requeste made either make suche assurance or repaye the moneye as he hathe alwayes promisd me

And my will is that whatsov^{r} aryses to my other children my sonne George be made equall to them that Two hundred poundes and one hundred marcks beinge accounted as part of the Somme. Item my will is that the portions wch shall become due to my twoe Sonnes John & George & to my eldest Daughter Bridgett yett unmarryed be payde to them as soone after my deathe as maye be because they are of years to governe theire portons. But for my twoe younger daughters Margaret and Elizabeth my will is that theire portons be payde at the dayes of theire severall marriages or at theire age of Twoe and twenty yeares theire portions to be ymployed in the meane tyme for theire mayntenance and for the increase of y^{eir} portions if it will beare it. And if they or either of them dye before that tyme of marriage or of twoe and twentye yeares that then the portions of them or either of them soe dyenge shal be equallye devided amongste my othere children wch shal be alyve at theire deathe And because theire maye be some tyme before they receave anythinge for theire mayntenance oute of the ymployment of theire portions my Will is that to eache of my children John, George, Bridgett Margarett and Elizabeth there be Twentye poundes payde at the same tyme as I have formerlie appointed the like somme to be payde to my Mother Item I give to my hono^{r}able and faithful friendes Mr Robert Karr of his Mjst^{ys} bedchamb^{r} that Picture of mine wch is taken in Shaddowes and was made very many years before I was of this Profession And to my hono^{r}able frend Sr John Davers I give what Picture he shall accept of those that remayne unbequeathed And this my last Will and Testament made in the feare of God whose Mercye I humbly begge & constantlye relye uppon in Christe Jesus & in perfecte love & charitie wth all the Worlde whose pardon I aske from the lowest of my Servants to the highest of my Superior^{s}. I writt all wth myne owne hand & subscribed my name to everie page thereof of wch theire are five & sealled the same & published and declared it to be my last Will the thirtenth daye of December 1630——

Notes and Queries.

THE EARLY EARLS OF MAR, vol. iv, p. 177.—In the Lyon Herald's article on the Continuity of the Celtic "Mormaers" and their immediate successors, the "Earls" of Mar, he refers (pp. 187-8) to the third marriage of Christian Bruce (widow of Earl Gratnet) to Sir Andrew Moray of Bothwell, and gives a most convincing reason against the received belief that John Moray of Bothwell was a son of this marriage. This is the Papal Dispensation for the marriage of John Moray's widow, the Countess of Menteth, to Thomas, Earl of Mar, grandson of Christian Bruce, in 1352, where the only relationship between Moray and Mar is stated as in the third and fourth degrees of affinity. On the common hypothesis, Moray, as uterine brother of Earl Donald of Mar, would have been Earl Thomas's uncle; thus in the closest degree of Consanquinity—the second. The Lyon further refers to a discovery made by me regarding Sir Andrew Moray's age, and says that "John Moray could scarcely have been his son by a former marriage, and is more likely to have been his brother." I hardly think Sir Andrew's age (though only 28 when he married Christian Bruce in 1326) is an obstacle, for he might have had a wife six or seven years earlier, but apart from this I would refer my learned friend, the Lyon, to the Chartulary of Moray, p. 296,[1] where there is a grant on 12 April, 1351, by "Johannes de Moravia Panetarius Scotie," of 8 marks to a chaplaincy in Elgin Cathedral, out of the lands of Ardtrilly and Croy, for the soul of "Domini Andree de Moravia Patris mei;" and Confirmation on 8 May, 1353, by "Thomas de Moravia Panetarius Scotie," of the above grant, "Johannis de Moravio fratris mei senioris." The Lyon must have temporarily forgotten these references, which prove that John and Thomas were sons of Sir Andrew Moray. Who their mother was is another question. Another reason why John could not be Sir Andrew's brother is that the latter is shewn in the inquisition to have been born after his father's death; therefore, could not have had two younger brothers—for Thomas requires to be accounted for. In the work referred to, Mr. Riddell touched on the curious circumstance that Sir Andrew Moray of Touch-Adam and Manuel (ancestor of the present Murrays of Polmaise, in Stirlingshire), was styled "cousin" by David II., and hence he inferred that he was nearly related maternally—perhaps a younger brother of John and Thomas Moray as sons of Christian Bruce.

Now Sir Andrew of Bothwell, was styled in the dispensation for his marriage to Christian Bruce, to be in the 4th degree of consanquinity, so David II. as her nephew would naturally call Andrew of Touch-Adam as his father's son, his cousin; and while this infers no descent from Christian Bruce, it greatly strengthens the probability

Notes and Queries.

THE KING'S EXAMS OF MAN, vol. iv, p. 177.—In the Lyon Herald's article on the Genealogy of the Clothe "Alexanders" and their immediate ancestors, the "Early" of Mar, he refers (pp. 187-8) to the third marriage of Christian Bruce (widow of Lord Cranstoun) to Sir Andrew Murray of Blythswell, and gives a most convincing reason against the received belief that John Murray of Blythswell was a son of this marriage. This is the Papal Dispensation for the marriage of John Murray's widow, the Countess of Sutherland, to Thomas, Earl of Mar, grandson of Christian Bruce, in 1347, where the only relationship between Murray and Mar is stated as in the third and fourth degrees of affinity. On the common hypothesis, Murray, as stepfather of Earl Donald of Mar, would have been Earl Thomas's uncle; thus in the closest degree of Consanguinity—the second. The Lyon further refers to a discovery made by the regarding Sir Andrew Murray's age, and says that "John Murray could scarcely have been his son by a former marriage, and is more likely to have been his brother." I hardly think Sir Andrew's age (though only 22 when he married Christian Bruce in 1316) is an obstacle, for he might have had a wife six or seven years earlier, but apart from this I would refer my learned friend, the Lyon, to the Chartulary of Moray, p. 290,[1] where there is a grant on 12 April, 1331, by "Johannes de Moravia Panetarius Scotie," of 3 marks to a chaplaincy in Elgin Cathedral, out of the lands of Ardtally and Cory, for the soul of "Domini Andree de Moravia Parti sui;" and Confirmation on 8 May, 1332, by "Thomas de Moravia Pincernarius Scotie," of the above grant, "Johannis de Moravio fratris sui carnalis." The Lyon must have temporarily forgotten these references, which prove that John and Thomas were sons of Sir Andrew Murray. To their mother was a another question. Another reason why John could not be Sir Andrew's brother is that the latter is shown in the inquisition to have been born after his father's death; therefore, could not have had two younger brothers—for Thomas requires to be accounted for. In the work referred to, Mr. Riddell touched on the curious circumstance that Sir Andrew Murray of Tweed-Aldam and Alnmuth (ancestor of the present Murrays of Polmaise, in Stirlingshire), was styled "cousin" by David II, and hence he inferred that he was nearly related maternally—perhaps a younger brother of John and Thomas Murray as sons of Christian Bruce.

Now Sir Andrew of Bothwell, was styled in the dispensation for his marriage to Christian Bruce, to be in the 4th degree of consanguinity, so David II. as her nephew would naturally call Andrew of Tweed-Aldam as his father's son, his cousin; and while this leaves no descent from Christian Bruce, it greatly strengthens the probability that Andrew of Touch-Adam was a younger brother of John and Thomas ; in which case the Murrays of Polmaise must be the chiefs of the ancient Moravii, presuming their male descent from Sir Andrew of Touch-Adam and Manuel to be unbroken. This fact of his being a younger brother, would also account for David II. giving him crown lands in Stirlingshire as a compensation for the great Bothwell estates carried to the Douglas family by Johanna the daughter and heiress[2] of his elder brother, Sir Thomas of Bothwell.

Wicketshaw, in Lanarkshire, which Mr. Riddell stated to be in the barony of Bothwell, and referred to the fact of Andrew of Touch-Adam holding it in appanage, as a strong proof of his near relationship to the Lord of Bothwell, does not seem to have been so, but appears to be in the barony of Touch-Adam by annexation. Besides, it was crown property in 1303, and under the name of "Wygoteshawe" appears in an Exchequer Roll of that year,[3] as paying 12 marks (3s. 4d.) rent to the officers of Edward I., who was then in possession.

The descent from Christian Bruce is also said to be testified by the appearance of the royal tressure of Scotland on the Moray of Bothwell Seals, though Mr. Riddell acknowledges he had not "found it on their Ancienter Seals" to use his quaint language ; nor have I among any in the Public Record Office, but there is a seal of Thomas Moray of Bothwell, on 5 Oct., 1357, appended to the ratification of the treaty for King David's ransom, which shows a shield with 3 stars or mullets, 2 and 1 within a bordure charged with 8 bezants or roundels. There is an earlier one of Sir Andrew, his grandfather, in 1292,[4] showing the 3 mullets and bordure, charged with 11 roundels. In Laing's Catalogue they are called "roses," but this is only conjecture. In Thomas's seal of 1357, they are plain roundels, beyond question ; where these came from is a point for the Lyon to solve. The only instance that I have seen of the tressure on a Moray shield, is in the choir of Bothwell church. This was founded about 1399 or 1400, by Archibald, Earl of Douglas, husband of Johanna Moray; and in the East window there are four shields, two outside and two inside, at the spring of the arch. One gives his own shield, as Lord of Galloway ; another, the arms of David, Duke of Rothesay, and Marjory Douglas, impaled ; a third, those of Archibald Douglas and his wife, a daughter of Robert III, also impaled ; the fourth, also impaled, bears, dexter, 3 mullets, 2 and 1, within a tressure—and 3 mullets in chief ; sinister, 3 mullets, 2 and 1. I have often tried to conjecture the meaning of this fourth shield, and what persons it commemorates. The Lyon, in some one of his exchequer prefaces, remarks, in my opinion with great truth, that the common belief of the royal tressure in a shield, indicating royal descent, is far from being invariably correct.

On the same instrument to which Sir Thomas Moray's seal is attached will be found that of Sir William Livingston, of Calendar, which bears the double tressure of Scotland. How, or if, he was related to royalty is not, I believe, known.

TRAFFORD OF SWYTHAMLEY, CO. STAFFORD.—Where can I find proof that William Trafford, of Wilmslow, co. Chester, who purchased the estate of Swythamley, co. Stafford, 32 Hen. From the will of Philip Mainwaring, of Peover (*Lancashire and Cheshire Wills and Inventories, Chetham Soc. [2] Called "Widow" (Theiner), though one would almost think this must be an error. For Sir Thomas, if not the son of Christian Bruce, was quite old enough to be the father of the future Countess of Douglas, as he was probably born about 1324, and she was married about 1366.

that Andrew of Tonich-Adam was a younger brother of John and Thomas; in which case the Moneys of Tolmalie must be the chiefs of the ancient Moneys, assuming their male descent from Sir Andrew of Tonich-Adam and Maund to be unbroken. This last of his being a younger brother, would also account for David II. giving him crown lands in Stirlingshire as a compensation for the great Rothwell estate granted to the Douglas family by Johnnan the daughter and heiress of his elder brother, Sir Thomas of Rothwell.

Wickersham, in Lanarkshire, which Mr. Riddell stated to be in the barony of Rothwell, and referred to the fact of Andrew of Tonich-Adam holding it in succession, as a strong proof of his near relationship to the Lord of Rothwell, does not seem to have been so, but appears to be in the barony of Tonich-Adam by annexation. Besides, it was crown property in 1305, and under the name of "Wrychesshaw" appears in an Exchequer Roll of that year, as paying 12 marks (£8, 4s.) rent to the officers of Edward I., who was then in possession.

The document from Christian Innes is also said to be testified by the appearance of the royal treasure of Scotland on the Along of Rothwell Seals, though Sir Robert acknowledges he had not "found it on their Aviniuter Seals" on his visiting Langmuir; nor have I anything any in the Public Record Office, but there is a seal of Thomas Money of Rothwell, on 6 Oct., 1387, appended to the ratification of the treaty for King David's ransom, which shows a shield with 3 chevrons or mullets, 2 and 1 within a bordure charged with 8 besants or roundels. There is an earlier one of Sir Andrew, his grandfather, in 1292,[1] showing the 3 mullets and bordure, charged with 11 roundels. In Laing's Catalogue they are called "roses," but this is only conjecture. In Thomas's seal of 1387, they are plain roundels, beyond question; where Chalmers came from is a point for the Lyon to solve. The only instance that I have seen of the treasure on a Money shield, is in the shield of Rothwell church. This was founded about 1380 or 1400, by Archibald, Earl of Douglas, husband of Johnnan Money; and in the East window there are four shields, two outside and two inside, at the spring of the arch. One gives his own shield, as Lord of Galloway; another, the arms of Donald, Duke of Rothesay and Margrey Douglas, impaled; a third, those of Archibald Douglas and his wife, a daughter of Robert III. also impaled; the fourth, the impaled, heater, dexter, 3 mullets, 2 and 1, sinister, a treasure—and 3 mullets in chief; sinister, 3 mullets, 2 and 1. I have often tried to conjecture the meaning of this fourth shield, and what purpose it commemorates. The Lyon, in some one of his exclusive pedigrees, assures, in my opinion with great truth, that the common belief of the royal treasure in a shield, indicating royal descent, is far from being invariably correct.

On the same buttresses to which Sir Thomas Money's seal is attached will be found that of Sir William Livingston, of Calendar, which bears the double treasure of Scotland. How, or if, he was related to royalty is not, I believe, known.

From the will of Philip Stanswing, of Dover (Lancaster and Chester Wills and Inventories, Chetham Soc. THE LATE MR. WALFORD D. SELBY.

I have been asked by his family to put on record a few particulars relating to the biography of one of my dearest friends, Mr. Walford D. Selby, of the Public Record Office; and as the request has been repeated by the Editor of the Genealogist, to which he devoted the best portion of his later years and matured experience, I do not think that I ought to decline the task, especially as I am acquainted with some particulars of his life which are not known to the public, but which there can be no harm in communicating.

Walford Dakin Selby was the eldest of the four sons of the late Mr. Thomas Selby, of Witley and Wimbish Halls, in the north of Essex, a gentleman whose great grandfather had taken in 1783, by Royal Licence the name of Selby, in lieu of his patronymic Browne, and who was traditionally descended on the father's side from a younger branch of the Brownes, Viscounts Montagu, of Cowdray Park, Sussex. I say 'traditionally,' because, although the late Mr. Selby many years ago preferred a claim to that dormant Peerage, he never proceeded with that claim so far as to establish it beyond all dispute—a single link in the chain was wanting; and in the absence of positive proof of one particular marriage, on which the case depended, it would have been madness to have gone further.

His mother was Elizabeth, youngest daughter and co-heir of Mr. Ralph Foster, of Holderness, in the East Riding of Yorkshire. Mr. T. Selby died about the year 1880, and his widow survived him a few years, dying at her house in Finborough Road, South Kensington, in 1885. Mr. W. D. Selby was the grandson of the Rev. Charles Bridge Selby, whose father, Thomas Selby, Esq., of Ightham Moat,[1] Kent, disinherited his son of that property by will, leaving it to a gentleman of the same name though no relation, in the North of England.

Walford Dakin Selby was born on the 16th of June, 1845, in Cambridgeshire, where his parents were then living. At an early age he was sent to Brighton College, and then to Tunbridge School, where he was a pupil of Dr. I. Welldon, the successor of Dr. Knox in that post. At Tunbridge he was a fair scholar, though he gave little promise of that grasp of historical, biographical, and genealogical lore, for which he afterwards became so distinguished. On leaving school, he was placed with Dr. Stromberg at Bonn, to learn German and French, his parents having given up their original intention of sending him to one of the English Universities.

Circumstances arose which threw a gloom over the last years of his father's lifetime, and before he was twenty years of age, Walford Selby found himself obliged to act, more or less, in loco parentis towards his younger brothers and sisters.

For the three youngest brothers introductions to city and commercial life were obtained mainly through my deceased cousin, Mr.

[1] Ightham Moat was sold by the last of the Selby family only a week before my friend's death; and in his weak state of health the news of its sale doubtless helped on the end.

THE LATE MR. WALFORD D. SELBY.

I have been asked by his family to put on record a few particulars relating to the biography of one of my dearest friends, Mr. Walford D. Selby, of the Public Record Office; and as the request has been reported by the Editors of the Genealogist, to which he devoted the best portion of his later years and matured experience, I do not think that I ought to decline the task, especially as I am acquainted with some particulars of his life which are not known to the public, but which there can be no harm in commemorating.

Walford Dakin Selby was the eldest of the four sons of the late Mr. Thomas Selby, of Willey and Winbish Hall, in the north of Essex, a gentleman whose great grandfather had taken in 1783, by Royal License the name of Selby, in lieu of his patronymic Browne, and who was traditionally descended on the father's side from a younger branch of the Brownes, Viscounts Montague, of Cowdray Park, Sussex. I say 'traditionally,' because, although the late Mr. Selby many years ago preferred a claim to that dormant Peerage, he never proceeded with that claim as far as to establish it beyond all dispute—a single link in the chain was wanting; and in the absence of positive proof of one particular marriage, on which the case depended, it would have been madness to have gone further.

His mother was Elizabeth, youngest daughter and co-heir of Mr. Ralph Foster, of Holderness, in the East Riding of Yorkshire. Mr. T. Selby died about the year 1880, and his widow survived him a few years, dying at her house in Finborough Road, South Kensington, in 1885. Mr. W. D. Selby was the grandson of the Rev. Charles Hodge Selby, whose father, Thomas Selby, Esq., of Lightham Moat,[1] Kent, disinherited his son of that property by will, leaving it to a gentleman of the same name though no relation, in the North of England.

Walford Dakin Selby was born on the 16th of June, 1845, in Cambridgeshire, where his parents were then living. At an early age he was sent to Brighton College, and then to Tunbridge School, where he was a pupil of Dr. I. Weldon, the successor of Dr. Knox in that post. At Tunbridge he was a fair scholar, though he gave little promise of that grasp of historical, biographical, and genealogical lore, for which he afterwards became so distinguished. On leaving school, he was placed with Dr. Stromberg at Bonn, to learn German and French, his parents having given up their original intention of sending him to one of the English Universities.

Circumstances arose which threw a gloom over the last years of his father's lifetime, and before he was twenty years of age, Walford Selby found himself obliged to act, more or less, in loco parentis towards his younger brothers and sisters.

For the three youngest brothers introductions to city and commercial life were obtained mainly through my deceased cousin, Mr.

[1] Lightham Moat was sold by the last of the Selby family only a week before my friend's death; and in his weak state of health the news of its sale doubtless helped on the end.

Cornelius Walford; but Walford Selby himself became much attached to me, personally. As I happened to learn accidentally one day on visiting the late Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy on business, at the Public Record Office in Fetter Lane, that a vacancy was likely to occur among his subordinate officers, I persuaded my dear friend to offer himself a candidate for it. At that time it was necessary, in order to enter the Civil Service, to obtain an introduction from some public man, and I requested my old schoolfellow, the late Sir Charles DuCane, an Essex neighbour and friend of my family, to procure for him admission as a candidate. Accordingly, as soon as the vacancy occurred, three candidates were selected to compete for it, and Walford Selby was chosen.

He was admitted as a Junior Clerk in the Record Office in or about 1865, and before he had been many months in harness, I had the satisfaction of being told privately by Sir Thomas Hardy that I had done a positive benefit to the public service by suggesting and recommending my young protegé for the Record Office. To the last the Deputy Keeper of the Rolls continued to think and speak most highly of his merits, and more than once he told me that he should do his best to push on the interests of so able and so promising a public servant.

His rise in the office, as is the case in all public offices where private influence is not brought to bear, was gradual; and I have been told that the first special work to which he directed his attention was a search after materials to assist Mr. F. W. Furnival for a Life of Chaucer. This led him to devote himself more especially to a study of the biography of that poet, and of his surroundings; the outcome of which was his issuing and circulating among his friends a small collection of papers relating to the Robbery committed on Chaucer at Hatcham. This was about the year 1874; more recently he had collected sundry other materials illustrating Chaucer's Life; in the course of 1888 he followed up his favourite subject still further by contributing to the Athenæum an important original paper discussing the question whether Chaucer was the Forrester of North Petherton in Somerset. Along with his friend Mr. James Greenstreet, he founded in 1883 the Pipe Roll Society, of which he continued to the last to be the moving spirit, Director in Chief, and Honorary Treasurer.

He was a frequent contributor on literary subjects to the Athenæum, Academy and St. James' Gazette, and he wrote one or two of the best papers in the two first volumes of the Antiquary whilst I was its Editor. To my Antiquarian Magazine from first to last he was a constant contributor, both of signed and unsigned articles, and also of most friendly advice—the more valuable because it was based on practical experience. At the period of his decease he was preparing a new edition of The Red Book of the Exchequer, and had also in hand, with a view to editing it with notes, the MS. translation by Queen Elizabeth, of Boëthius de Consolatione Philosophiæ, as also the certificates of Change of Residence from Elizabeth's reign downwards, a subject which had never been dealt with previously, and also a new Index of Inquisitiones post mortem.

During the last five or six years of his life he devoted much time to the work of editing the Genealogist, but the labour was beyond his strength during the long illness which preceded his death.

He also edited Bond's Handbook of Dates, and another small volume entitled the Jubilee Date Book. He also assisted Mr. Walter Rye in preparing and editing one or two volumes of his Norfolk Records, and Mr. Phillimore in his work, "How to write a Pedigree."

In the Public Record office Mr. Selby was universally beloved, both by his fellow Civil Servants and by all who were brought into contact with him, officially and otherwise. To all he was courteous, patient, and gentle, and willing to impart that information of which he had such accumulated stores; and searchers of the public records, and habitués of the large round room in which those searches are conductd, will long miss his kindly and genial presence. His zeal, industry, and ability were thoroughly appreciated by both Sir Thomas Hardy, and by his brother and successor at the Rolls, the late Sir William Hardy; and on the death of the latter in 1887, it was thought, not only by his personal friends, but by others who knew him only officially, that Mr. Selby would have been selected to fill the vacancy. But that was not to be. Dis aliter visum est; and, contrary to usage and precedent, the Deputy Keepership of the Rolls was conferred on a man who had not been brought up in the traditions of the office, one though of high culture, and with proved historical tastes. It is pleasant to record the fact that no one regarded this appointment with less jealousy than Mr. Selby himself.

The testimony to his value, that appeared on the 10th of August, in the Athenæum, is well worth perusal, and it is the more valuable as it was written by one who cannot be accused of partiality.

For myself I desire to place on record the fact that if ever a life was spent and lost in the public service of his fellow countrymen, it was that of Walford Selby. The private room assigned to him at the Record Office, adjoining the Search Room, in which he spent most of the hours of attendance, was always remarkable for the closeness and stuffiness of its atmosphere, and those who visited him there frequently remarked to him that it was, and must be, most unhealthy. Mr. Selby more than once drew the attention of the authorities to its unsanitary condition; but public bodies are slow to move, or to be moved, and the result was fatal.

Early in November last Mr. Selby returned to his house in Clyde Street, South Kensington, from two days pheasant shooting in Essex, when he found himself very ill. In a day or two the disease made itself clear; it was typhoid fever. He was dangerously ill for several weeks, but passed the crisis safely, and gradually got sufficiently well to be removed early this year to Bournemouth, where he spent the spring. He returned to London early in June, and went back to his work at the Record Office, alas! as it proved, and as his friends had feared, too soon. His strength was overtaxed, and he suffered from sleeplessness. He was at his office for a few hours on Friday, the 2nd of August. On the next morning the sad end came suddenly, I care not to say how suddenly—and his kind, noble, and gentle spirit passed away. On the 8th he was laid in his grave by the side of his mother in Kensal Green Cemetery.

I was absent from London at the Norwich Archæological Congress at the time, when I received from his sister, Mrs. Gully, a few lines telling me of his death; but having been sent thither by the Times, I could not leave or return to town to be present at the funeral. I mentioned the fact, however, to some of his friends who took part in the Congress, and the news spread quite a gloom over the meeting: and Mr. Walter Rye prefaced his paper on "Unpublished materials for a history of Norfolk," by a few brief but touching words, expressing the loss which Genealogical and Archæological studies had sustained by his death.

But to me the loss is irreparable: I have lost in him one of the kindest and staunchest of friends, and one whose counsel, young as he was, I always found to be wise, prudent, and safe. He has passed away;

Multis ille bonis flebilis occidit,
Nulli flebilior quam mihi.

ADD: MS: 24,458.

The collections of the late Mr. Joseph Hunter, F.S.A. are well known to most of our Northern Antiquaries. The collection here indexed was made when he was engaged in preparing his History of South Yorkshire, and includes a vast mass of genealogical information which owing to the families contained in it being for the most part those not to be ranked with what are frequently termed COUNTY FAMILIES was omitted or not considered of sufficient importance to be included in that work.

THE WHITMORES OF LUDSON, CO. SALOP.

I hope later on to show the probable line of descent from two of John[5] Whitmore's sons, John and George, but will now deal with his eldest surviving son Thomas,[6] born 2 Feb., 1693-4. In the matriculations of Balliol Coll. Oxon. occurs "10 Feb., 1710-11, Thomas Whitmore, aged 16, son of Thomas Whitmore of Ludson, co. Salop, Gent." This is clearly an error, for Thomas son of John, as there was no Thomas Whitmore, of Ludson at that date and the age agrees exactly with the son of John.[5]

The old indenture which has come into my hands is dated June 1, 1730, and is a lease and release, by which I understand a total sale is effected. It is from Thomas Whitmore of Ludson, co. Salop, Esquire, to John Broadfield of Bridgnorth, co. Salop, Gent., and disposes of a considerable quantity of land.

THE WHITMORES OF LUDSON, CO. SALOP.

I hope later on to show the probable line of descent from two of John[5] Whitmore's sons, John and George, but will now deal with his eldest surviving son Thomas,[6] born 2 Feb., 1693-4. In the matriculations of Balliol Coll. Oxon. occurs "10 Feb., 1710-11, Thomas Whitmore, aged 16, son of Thomas Whitmore of Ludson, co. Salop, Gent." This is clearly an error, for Thomas son of John, as there was no Thomas Whitmore, of Ludson at that date and the age agrees exactly with the son of John.[5]

The old indenture which has come into my hands is dated June 1, 1750, and is a lease and release, by which I understand a total sale is effected. It is from Thomas Whitmore of Ludson, co. Salop, Esquire, to John Freemblud of Birdgmorth, co. Salop, Gent., and disposes of a considerable quantity of land.

I presume that this closed the connection of the Whitmores with Ludson, and I should be glad to know more of this Thomas[6] Whitmore.

The next item copied by Col. Chester from these matriculations reads, "Balliol College, Jany. 14, 1713-14, John Whitmore, aged 17, son of John Whitmore of Letster, co. Staff., Gent." This I confidently claim as a mistake on the register, because there is no such place as "Letster" in Staffordshire, or anywhere else, and no John Whitmore in the gentry of Staff. yet discovered by my extended search. Moreover, in 1746, another John[7] Whitmore, son of George, is recorded at Balliol, and I shall prove him to have been a grandson of John,[5] nephew of Thomas.[6] Every probability points to the fact that John[6] of Balliol was also the brother of Thomas,[6] and not a namesake coming from an unknown stock and residence. And this is strengthened by the fact that in 1750, Edward, son of the John of 1714, was also of Balliol.

We may assume therefore, that the student of 1714 is John[6] Whitmore, the tenth child of John of Ludson. I find certainly that he was a clergyman, settled at Fenny Compton, co. Warwick, that he had a son Edward[7] of Balliol, Oct. 10, 1750, aged 17, and two daughters. Edward[7] was of Upton-upon-Severn, and died s.p., May 1, 1816, aged 83. His sister Elizabeth[7] Whitmore, married Edmund Lechmere, M.P., of Severn End, and had issue Sir Anthony Lechmere, Bart., whose descendants enjoy the title.

Col. Chester also was able to supply some facts in regard to the descendants of George[6] Whitmore, the thirteenth child of John[5] Whitmore of Ludson. The matriculation reads, "Balliol College, 1745-6, March 19, John(7) Whitmore, aged 17, son of George(6) Whitmore of St. Bartholomew, London, Gent." This John[7] Whitmore, died April 8, 1795, aged 68, and was buried at Creeting-all-Saints, Suffolk. He had a son Thomas,[8] born Nov. 25, 1773, who was the father of Charles Horatio[9] Whitmore of Ipswich, born in 1809.

The identification is made certain by a record contained in a Prayer Book in the possession of the family. For special reasons, I annex this record as relating to the Acton family. But it will be seen that it contains the names, births and baptisms of all of the fifteen children of John[5] Whitmore of Ludson, though not mentioning the place; and in fact, I think the descendants had lost the recollection of the locality. Hence, I cannot doubt that this record was transmitted in the line of George,[6] the thirteenth child of John,[5] and that this completes the family record. It is not improbable that the size of the family with which John[5] was blessed, led to their dispersion and to the sale of the family estates by the eldest son Thomas, when he was only 36 years old.

The following is from a Prayer Book printed in 1670, formerly belonging to a Margaret Whitmore; the book was in 1861, in the possession of Mrs. Moore of Badley, co. Suffolk.

"Jo. Whitmore and Sarah his wife were marryed the 9th day of Aprill, 1683.

"And ffrances their daughter was borne the fourteenth day of ffebruary aboute seaven of the clock att night, 1683, and was baptized the five and twentieth.

"And William their sonne was borne the seventeenth day of

I presume that this closed the connection of the Whitmores with Ludson, and I should be glad to know more of this Thomas[4] Whitmore.

The next item copied by Col. Chester from these matriculations reads, "Balliol College, Jany. 14, 1713-14, John Whitmore, aged 17, son of John Whitmore of Lester, co. Staff., Gent." This I consider identity claim as a mistake on the register, because there is no such place as "Lester" in Staffordshire, or any where else, and no John Whitmores in the county of Staff. yet discovered by my extended search. Moreover, in 1716, another John[7] Whitmore, son of George, is recorded at Balliol, and I shall prove him to have been a grandson of John,[5] nephew of Thomas.[4] Every probability points to the fact that John[5] of Balliol was also the brother of Thomas,[4] and not a nameless coming from an unknown stock and residence. And this is strengthened by the fact that in 1750, Edward, son of the John of 1714, was also of Balliol.

We may assume therefore, that the student of 1714 is John[5] Whitmore, the tenth child of John of Ludson. I find certainly that he was a clergyman, settled at Fenny Compton, co. Warwick, that he had a son Edward[7] of Balliol, Oct. 19, 1750, aged 17, and two daughters. Edward[7] was of Upton-upon-Severn, and died s.p. May 1, 1816, aged 83. His sister Elizabeth[7] Whitmore, married Edmund Lechmere, M.P., of Severn End, and had issue Sir Anthony Lechmere, Bart., whose descendants enjoy the title.

Col. Chester also was able to supply some links in regard to the descendants of George[6] Whitmore, the thirteenth child of John[5] Whitmore of Ludson. The matriculation reads, "Balliol College, 1743-6, March 19, John(?) Whitmore, aged 17, son of George(?) Whitmore of St. Bartholomew, London, Gent." This John[7] Whitmore, died April 8, 1795, aged 68, and was buried at Greating-all-Saints, Suffolk. He had a son Thomas,[8] born Nov. 24, 1775, who was the father of Charles Horatio[9] Whitmore of Ipswich, born in 1809.

The identification is made certain by a record contained in a Prayer Book in the possession of the family. For special reasons, I annex this record as relating to the Acton family. But it will be seen that it contains the names, births and baptisms of all of the fifteen children of John[5] Whitmore of Ludson, though not mentioning the place; and in fact, I think the descendants had lost the recollection of the locality. Hence, I cannot doubt that this record was transmitted in the line of George,[6] the thirteenth child of John,[5] and that this completes the family record. It is not improbable that the sixe of the family with which John[5] was blessed, led to their dispersion and to the sale of the family estates by the oldest son Thomas, when he was only 36 years old.

The following is from a Prayer Book printed in 1670, formerly belonging to a Margaret Whitmore; the book was in 1861, in the possession of Mrs. Moore of Hadley, co. Suffolk.

"Jo. Whitmore and Sarah his wife were marryed the 9th day of April, 1681.

"And ffrancee their daughter was borne the fourteenth day of ffebruary about ye ccccon of the clock att night, 1683, and was baptized the five and twentieth.

"And William their sonne was borne the seventeenth day of October 1685 aboute a quarter before six of the clock att night and was baptized the seaven and twentieth.

"And Sarah theire daughter was borne the twentyeth day of October 1686, between nine and ten of the clock and baptized the Sabbath [follow]ing.

"And Elizabeth their daughter was borne the fourteenth day of January [1687-8.]

"And Anne their daughter was borne upon the sixth day of Aprill about 11 of the clock in the morning and was baptized the 28th, 1689.

"And Dorothy theire daughter was borne upon the sixth day of May about seaven in the evening and was baptized the 9th of May 1690.

"And Katherine their daughter was borne upon Wednesday (about six in the morning) the twentyeth day of May 1691 and was baptized the 24th of May.

"And Mabell their daughter was borne the second of May and was baptized the nine and twentieth, 1692.

"And Thomas their son was borne [torn] day of January about two of the clock 1693 and was [baptized the 2d of] February.

"And John their sonne was borne the last day of Aprill 1696 and was baptized the 14th May.

"And Mary their daughter was borne the eight day of March being Good [Friday] 1697-8, and was baptized the thirteenth of the same.

"And Henrietta theire daughter was borne the ffirst of September 1699 and was baptized the 9th day following And George theire son was borne the thirteenth day of ffebruary by ffive of the clock in the morning 1700 and was baptized on the morrow.

"And Richard theire son was borne the twenty seventh day of January Anno Dmi 1702 by one of the clock in the afternoon and was baptized the [seventh] of ffebruary.

"And Jane theire daughter was borne the eight day of May 1707, and was baptized the seaventeenth of ye same month."

In the same handwriting are the following notes:

"Mr. Clement Acton's birth day is the seaventeenth of February."

"Clement Acton and Jane his wife was married the thirtieth day of March one thousand seven hundred and fifty five, being Easter Monday."

"I came home to the Coombs upon Thursday, the twenty fourth day of April 1755."

In another hand is written:

"My dear mother departed this life the twentieth of June, one thousand seven hundred and fifty two, a Saturday morning betwixt four and five o'clock."

"Clement Acton, Esqr departed this life February ye 5th 1764 and was buried ye 9th of the said month at Tasley in Shropshire."

"My dere sonn William Whitmore departed this life January the 4th day in the yere 1700."

By the kindness of Edward Farrer Acton, Esq. of Gatacre Park it has been found that this marriage of John Whitmore and Sarah Acton was at Claverley, Salop, and all the baptisms are there recorded except that of the youngest child Jane. The burial of Mrs. Sarah Whitmore widow is also recorded there. It seems certain that this record was

October 1685 about a quarter before six of the clock att night and was baptized the seaven and twentieth.

"And Sarah their daughter was borne the twentyeth day of October 1686, between nine and ten of the clock and baptized the Sabbath [follow]ing.

"And Elizabeth their daughter was borne the fourteenth day of January [1687-8.]

"And Anne their daughter was borne upon the sixth day of April about 11 of the clock in the morning and was baptized the 28th, 1689.

"And Dorothy their daughter was borne upon the sixth day of May about seaven in the evening and was baptized the 9th of May 1690.

"And Katherine their daughter was borne upon Wednesday (about six in the morning) the twentyeth day of May 1691 and was baptized the 24th of May.

"And Mabell their daughter was borne the second of May and was baptized the nine and twentieth, 1692.

"And Thomas their son was borne [torn] day of January about two of the clock 1693 and was [baptized the 24 of] February.

"And John their sonne was borne the last day of April 1695 and was baptized the 14th May.

"And Mary their daughter was borne the eight day of March being Good [Friday] 1697-8, and was baptized the thirteenth of the same.

"And Henrietta their daughter was borne the first of September 1699 and was baptized the 9th day following. And George their son was borne the thirteenth day of February by five of the clock in the morning 1700 and was baptized on the morrow.

"And Richard their son was borne the twenty seventh day of January Anno Dni 1702 by one of the clock in the afternoon and was baptized the [seventh] of ffebruary.

"And Jane their daughter was borne the eight day of May 1707, and was baptized the seaventeenth of ye same month."

In the same handwriting are the following notes:

"Mr. Clement Aston's birth day is the seaventeenth of ffebruary."

"Clement Aston and Jane his wife was married the thirteith day of March one thousand seven hundred and fifty five, being Easter Monday."

"I came home to the Coombe upon Thursday, the twenty fourth day of April 1755."

In another hand is written:

"My dear mother departed this life the twentieth of June, one thousand seven hundred and fifty two, a Saturday morning betwixt four and five o'clock."

"Clement Aston, Esqr departed this life ffebruary ye 6th 1764 and was buried ye 9th of the said month at Tenley in Glouceshire."

"My dere sonn William Whitmore departed this life dannary the 4th day in the yere 1700."

By the kindness of Edward Farrer Aston, Esq. of Gatacre Park it has been found that this marriage of John Whitmore and Sarah Aston was at Claverley, Salop, and all the baptisms are there recorded except that of the youngest child Jane. The burial of Mrs. Sarah Whitmore widow is also recorded there. It seems certain that this record was copied and continued by one of the daughters; but who was Clement Acton and why was he so carefully mentioned? The Baronetages show that Sarah Acton who married John Whitmore had a brother Clement who died in 1726 and whose descendants possess Gatacre Park. His eldest son was Edward but he had certainly a son Thomas who died in 1741, says my informant, and may not improbably have had another son, Clement. The register at Tasley shows that Clement Acton of Halesowen was buried there 9th Feb. 1764, agreeing exactly with the Bible record. But if we accept this Clement of the record as the nephew of Mrs. Whitmore, why is he alone of her nephews recorded? I can only suppose that the Jane whom he married 30 March, 1755, was his cousin Jane Whitmore, though she was then 48 years, old, and he was probably older. This would account for his name being in a Whitmore family record. The Coombs mentioned is a locality in Halseowen, and the name is preserved in Coombs-wood and Coombs-gate.

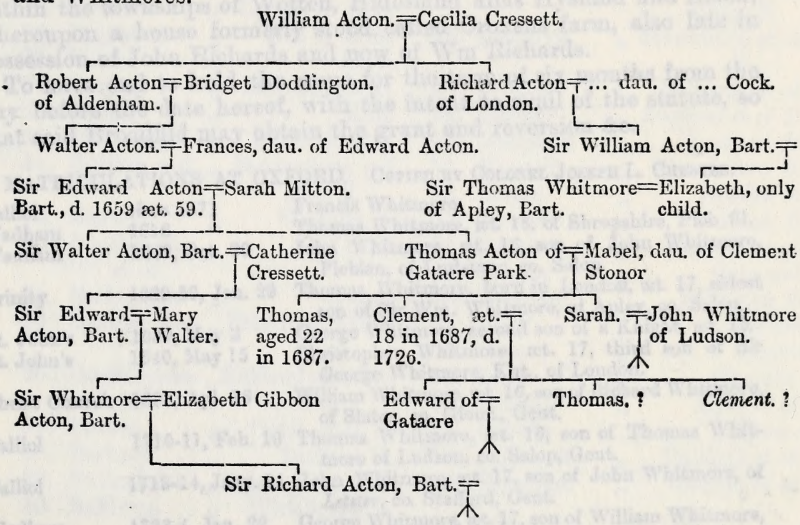
The following pedigree shows the connection between the Actons and Whitmores.



Abstract made from the original in my possession January, 1885—W.H.W.

Indenture made June 1st 1730 between Thomas Whitmore of Ludson, co. Salop, Esquire and John Broadfinield of Bridgnorth co. Salop, gent. by which W sells for 5 shillings the messuage cottage &c in the tything and township of Wondall in the parish of Claverley in Salop with all appurtenances and also the pieces of arrable meadow or pasture lying near the same between the land of said Whitmore, the lands of John Astley, gent and certain common lands heretofore in four parts called by the name of Holleye Birches and now in five parts divided and called by the names of the Upper Leasow, the Middle Leasow, the natch (?), the piece next the House and the Vineyard;—one other parcel now in two parts called by the names of the Mill Croft alias Millne Croft adjoining to land of said Whitmore and a certain lane leading from Claverley towards Hopetone on or near copied and continued by one of the daughters; but who was Clement Aston and why was he so carefully mentioned? The Inquisitions show that Sarah Aston who married John Whitmore had a brother Clement who died in 1730 and whose descendants possess Oatacre Park. His eldest son was Edward but he had certainly a son Thomas who died in 1741, says my informant, and may not improbably have had another son, Clement. The registers at Tasley shows that Clement Aston of Hulcoswen was buried there 9th Feb. 1761, agreeing exactly with the Bible record. But if we accept this Clement of the record as the nephew of Mrs. Whitmore, why is he alone of her nephews recorded? I can only suppose that the Jane whom he married 30 March, 1755, was his cousin Jane Whitmore, though she was then 45 years old, and he was probably older. This would account for his name being in a Whitmore family record. The Coombe mentioned is a locality in Halesowen, and the name is preserved in Coombe-wood and Coombe-gate.

The following pedigree shows the connection between the Astons and Whitmores.

DESCENT OF SMART OF TREWHITT, CO. NORTHUMBERLAND; FROM HERON, CARR, AND ALDER.

By WALTER B. THOMAS.

In an Article by "C," vol. vii., p. 22. (Old Series) the accuracy of this descent as set forth in Burke's Landed Gentry, 1879, is questioned, and the suggestion that the entry should have been, "by Grace, supposed to be a daughter of Thomas Carr, of Ford Castle, who was killed 1661," will in no wise correct it. Smart's Descendants of Prichard (evidently consulted by "C,) quotes at p. 110, Note B, from MS. ped. by Rev. T. W. Carr, "this Thomas Carr (d. 1661,) was married, and had a daughter Grace, who married William Alder." Again Raine, calls Lady Blake and Mrs. Babington, coheirs of their brother; and in Burke, Lady Blake is said to have inherited Ford. She was not however the eldest sister, and all these statements are more or less inaccurate. Thomas Carr, of Belford, was the last male heir of the Ford Carrs, but through his compromising his claim to Ford, his nieces, Lady Blake and her sisters, became possessed of one third, each, of the remainder of those estates, after the apportionment of Thomas of Belford's share. Sir Francis Blake eventually purchased the shares of his two sisters-in-law, and so became ultimately lord of the manor of Ford. Many errors in the pedigree of the Carrs of Ford, have now been corrected by research in the Record Office, and the muniment room of Ford Castle (by the kind permission of Louisa, Marchioness of Waterford) as shewn in the following abbreviated prdigree. An incorrect translation in 1868, of "modo uxor," in the Durham register, of the Admon. of Thomas Amorer was an additional difficulty. The early part of this pedigree is compiled from documents &c., in the Record Office; Ford Muniment room; Tower of London; Rolls Chapel; Kings Remembrancers; Chapter House, Westminster; Augmentation office; Archiepiscopal Library, Lambeth; First Fruits Office; Registries of York, Durham, &c., &c.

I. William Heron, of Hadeston (grandson of Jordan Hairun, 1168,) Governor of Bamburgh; and High Sheriff 1247. By marriage with Mary, daughter of Sir Richard de Forde, and heir of her grandfather Odonel de Forde, he became jure uxoris owner of Ford. His son,

II. William Heron, of Ford, and the land barony of Bokenfield. married first, Christian, heir of Roger de Notton (d. 21 Ed. I,) and had,

III. Sir Roger Heron (second surviving son,) of Ford and Crookham, Knt. He married first Elizabeth, third daughter of Adam, Baron Swynburne, and had a son,

IV. Sir William Heron, of Ford, and Thornton (by purchase) Knt. He married Isabella. A charter, dated 21 April, 14 Ed. III (1340), grants William Heron "dilectus vallettus noster" (in consideration of the "magnum locum," he held for us, in Scotland and elsewhere), permission to embattle his mansion house at Ford. His third but second surviving son,

In an Article by "C," vol. vii, p. 22, (Old Series) the accuracy of this descent as set forth in Burke's Landed Gentry, 1879, is questioned, and the suggestion that the entry should have been, "by Grace, supposed to be a daughter of Thomas Carr, of Ford Castle, who was killed 1661," will in no wise correct it. Smart's Descendants of Prudhoe (evidently consulted by "C,) quotes at p. 110, Note B, from MS. ped. by Rev. T. W. Carr, "this Thomas Carr (d. 1661,) was married, and had a daughter Grace, who married William Alder." Again Raine calls Lady Blake and Mrs. Babington, coheirs of their brother; and in Burke Lady Blake is said to have inherited Ford. Sir Francis Blake eventually purchased the shares of his two sisters-in-law, and so became ultimately lord of the manor of Ford. Many errors in the pedigree of the Carrs of Ford, have now been corrected by research in the Record Office, and the monument room of Ford Castle (by the kind permission of Louisa, Marchioness of Waterford) as shewn in the following abbreviated pedigree. An incorrect transcription in 1855, of "mods wave," in the Durham register, of the Admon. of Thomas Amorer was an additional difficulty. The early part of this pedigree is compiled from documents &c., in the Record Office; Ford Monument room; Tower of London; Rolls Chapel; Kings Remembrancers; Chapter House, Westminster; Augmentation office; Archiepiscopal Library, Lambeth; First Fruits Office; Registries of York, Durham, &c., &c.

I. WILLIAM HERON, of Halcoton (grandson of Jordan Harum, 1165,) Governor of Hamburgh; and High Sheriff 1242. By marriage with Mary, daughter of Sir Richard de Forde, and heir of her grandfather Odonel de Forde, he became jure uxoris owner of Ford. His son,

II. WILLIAM HERON, of Ford, and the land barony of Holmefield, married first, Christian, heir of Roger de Notton (d. 21 Ed. I.) and had,

III. Sir ROGER HERON (second surviving son,) of Ford and Crooklum, Knt. He married first Elizabeth, third daughter of Adam, Baron Swynburne, and had a son,

IV. Sir WILLIAM HERON, of Ford, and Thornton (by purchase) Knt. He married Isabella. A charter, dated 21 April, 14 Ed. III (1340) grants William Heron "dilecto ballivo nostro" (in consideration of the "weyman form," he held for us, in Scotland and elsewhere), permission to embattle his mansion house at Ford. His third but second surviving son,

V. John Heron, of Ford Castle, Crookham and Thornton, &c.; married Elizabeth Crookham (Ing. p. m., 1 April, 1409) and had,

VI. Sir William Heron, of Ford, Thornton, &c., Knt., who married Isabella Umfraville. He was slain by Sir John Maners, of Etal, 1431. His son,

VII. Sir John Heron, of Ford, Thornton, &c., Knt.; High Sheriff for Northumberland, 19, 21, 30, & 35, Hen. VI., and M.P. 20, 25, 27, Hen. VI. Killed at Towton, 1461; married 1438, by Papal Dispensation, Elizabeth, d. and h. of Sir William Heron, of Simondburn, Cornhill, &c., son of Sir William Heron, and grandson of Sir William Heron, "the Blind" of Simondburn, the second son of Sir Wm. Heron, of Ford, Knt., and elder brother of John (V) Heron. This marriage, as was probably intended, returned Ford to the right line of Herons, it having been usurped by John, over his elder brother William the blind, the second in entail, as appears by a fine levied of the Manor of Ford, 1347. His son,

VIII. Sir Roger Heron, of Ford, Thornton, Crookham, &c., Knt., escheator of Norhamshire, was the father of John Heron, a bastard, who slew Sir Robert Kerr, a favourite of James V. of Scotland. The refusal of Henry VIII to give him up to the vengeance of the Scotch King, was one of the causes of the invasion of England, which led to the disaster of Flodden Field, where Heron with his band of outlaws, rallied the broken English and turned the tide to victory. Sir Roger married Joanna——(who died a widow 1509-10,) and left,

IX. Sir William Heron (second son) of Ford, Crookham, Thornton, Twisell, &c., J.P., Norhamshire, 1523, High Sheriff, 17 Hen. VIII., was a prisoner in Scotland, when King James besieged and took Ford Castle. He died 1535, and left by his first wife, Elizabeth——, the "Ladye of Ford," an only son,

X. William Heron, of Ford, ob. v. p., having married Margaret daughter of Sir Thomas Forster, of Edderston, Knt., Marshal of Berwick, by Dorothy dau. of Robert, fifth Lord Ogle and Dorothy, dau. of Sir Henry Widdrington. Margaret married as third husband, Sir George Heron, of Chipchase Castle; she held for life the estates of Eshot and Cornhill. By William Heron, she had an only daughter,

XI. Elizabeth Heron, heiress of her grandfather; inherited Ford, Crookham, Cornhill, &c.; married Thomas Carr (living 1520-1557,) jure uxoris, owner of Ford, &c., Captain of Wark, second son of John Carr, of Hetton, Captain of Wark (by first wife, Margaret, daughter of Robert Collingwood, of Eslington,) son of John Carr, of Hetton (by Janet, daughter of Robert Clavering, of Callaly,) son of John Carr, of Hetton, whose ancestry is purely conjectural. They had issue:—

1. William Carr (XII).
2. Ralph Carr, of Howburne, J.P.; married Jane Ogle, and dying 1615, left issue, Ralph, Lancelot, and Jane, whose issue has not been traced.
3. Agnes.
4. Elizabeth.

V. John Heron, of Ford Castle, Crookham and Thornton, &c.; married Elizabeth Crookham (Inq. p. m. 1 April, 1409) and had,

VI. Sir William Heron, of Ford, Thornton, &c., Kt., who married Isabella Lindsayville. He was slain by Sir John Manners, of Etal, 1481. His son,

VII. Sir John Heron, of Ford, Thornton, &c., Kt.; High Sheriff for Northumberland, 19, 21, 30, & 33, Hen. VI., and M.P. 20, 23, 27, Hen. VI. Killed at Towton, 1461; married 1438, by Papal Dispensation, Elizabeth, d. and h. of Sir William Heron, of Simonburn, Cornhill, &c., son of Sir William Heron, and grandson of Sir William Heron, "the Blind" of Simonburn, the second son of Sir Wm. Heron, of Ford, Kt., and elder brother of John (V) Heron. This marriage, as was probably intended, returned Ford to the right line of Heron, it having been usurped by John, over his elder brother William the blind, the second in entail, as appears by a fine levied of the Manor of Ford, 1317. His son,

VIII. Sir Roger Heron, of Ford, Thornton, Crookham, &c., Kt., seneschal of Northumberland, was the father of John Heron, a bastard, who slew Sir Robert Ker, a favourite of James V. of Scotland. The refusal of Henry VIII to give him up to the vengeance of the Scotch King, was one of the causes of the invasion of England, which led to the disaster of Flodden Field, where Heron with his band of outlaws, rallied the broken English and turned the tide to victory. Sir Roger married Joanna —— (who died a widow 1509-10) and left,

IX. Sir William Heron (second son) of Ford, Crookham, Thornton, Twisell, &c., J.P., Northumberland, 1523, High Sheriff, 17 Hen. VIII., was a prisoner in Scotland, when King James besieged and took Ford Castle. He died 1533, and left, by his first wife, Elizabeth ——, the "Lady of Ford," an only son,

X. William Heron, of Ford ob. s. p., having married Margaret daughter of Sir Thomas Forster, of Edderston, Kt., Marshal of Berwick, by Dorothy dau. of Robert, fifth Lord Ogle and Dorothy, dau. of Sir Henry Widdrington. Margaret married as third husband, Sir George Heron, of Chipchase Castle; she held for life the estates of Fenwick and Cornhill. By William Heron, she had an only daughter,

XI. Elizabeth Heron, heiress of her grandfather; married Ford, Crookham, Cornhill, &c.; married Thomas Carr (living 1520-1557,) Jure uxoris, owner of Ford, &c., Captain of Wark, second son of John Carr, of Hetton, Captain of Wark (by first wife, Margaret, daughter of Robert Collingwood, of Eslington,) son of John Carr, of Hetton (by Janet, daughter of Robert Claverring, of Callaly,) son of John Carr, of Hetton, whose ancestry is purely conjectural. They had issue:—

1. William Carr (XII).
2. Ralph Carr, of Hexham, J.P.; married Jane Ogle, and dying 1616, left issue, Ralph, Lancelot, and Jane, whose issue has not been traced.
3. Agnes.
4. Elizabeth.

XII. William Carr of Ford Castle, Crookham, Marden, Cornhill, Sunnylaws and Eshot, 1551-1588; married Ursula, daughter of Henry Brandling, by Ursula, daughter of William Buckton, of Buckton, great grandson of Sir Piers Buckton, of Buckton (visit North[d] 1615,) and left issue:

Thomas (XIII), William (2), Henry (3), and 5 daughters (p. 90).

XIII. Thomas Carr, of Ford, Marden, Crookham, &c.; 1577-1641; High Sheriff, 1629; married first, Isabella, daughter of Sir John Selby, of Twisell, Knt., and had issue:—

(1.) Peregrine Carr, died æt. one year.

(2.) William Carr, of Ford, Crookham, Marden, &c., J.P.; died 1644; married Susan, daughter of Thomas Hodgson, of Hebburne, by a daughter of Sir William Bowyer, and left issue:

1. Thomas Carr, of Ford, Crookham, Marden, &c.; born 1634; slain (unmarried), at Alnwick, by his stepfather, John Radcliffe, 1660 or 1661.
2. Margaret; owned third of Ford, Crookham, &c.; married Arthur Babington, of Bourden, and left female issue.
3. Elizabeth; owned third of Ford, Crookham, &c.; married Sir Francis Blake, ancestor of Delaval, Mexboro, Monson, Warwick, Hastings, Audley, Waterford, Shrewsbury, Lothian, Londonderry, Melbourne, Baxenvale, &c.; became by purchase owner of her Sisters' shares in Ford, Crookham, &c.
4. Susanna; owner of third of Ford, Crookham, &c.; married first, Thomas Winckles, of Harnham, and had issue; married secondly, John Carr.

After the death of William Carr, his widow, Susan, married John Radcliffe of Dilston, and had further issue, and after the execution of Radcliffe for the murder of his stepson, she married thirdly, Ralph Salkeld (of Berwick?)

(3.) John Carr; d. s. p. circa, 1636.

(4.) Elizabeth.[1]

(5.) Susanna.[1]

Deeds in the Record Office connected with the suit in Chancery of "Carr v. Bradford, 25 Oct. 1656," mention by name the three sons; and the "several daughters" of Thomas Carr, by Isabel Selby, his first wife. The same deeds recite the deed of entail that Thomas Carr executed in 1606, whereby he settled his estates on his son William and his heirs; with remainder to other sons and their heirs; with rem. to his brother William, of Eshot, and his heirs; with rem. to others of his name and kindred. These documents also mention, among other relations of Sir John Selby, Dame Margaret Selby his relict; Sir John Selby his son; and Isabel his daughter; whose marriage settlements with Thomas Carr are quoted; and who is mentioned in her Father's Will, 1595 (Durham.) "I pray my son to be good to my dau. Isabel; as my trust is in him."

[1] If Sir Robert Kerr, of Etal, was son-in-law of Thomas, Laird of Ford; one of these daughters should be his wife. If he, being son of Sir William Kerr, or Carr, of Scotland (Greenhead), was a stepson of Thomas, viz., a son of Jane his 2[d] wife, the widow of William Carr, of Scotland, Raine's statement is comprehensible; "Margaret dau. of the Laird of fford, and sister to Sir Robert Carr." He is ancestor of Errol, Gainsboro', Wolverton, Abingdon, Fife, &c.

XII. WILLIAM CARR of Ford Castle, Crookham, Marden, Cornhill, Sunnylaws and Eslaw, 1571-1625; married Ursula, daughter of Henry Bradlings, by Ursula, daughter of William Bradston, of Bradston, great grandson of Sir Piers Bradston, of Bradston (vide North[e] 1515,) and left issue:—

Thomas (XIII), William (2), Henry (3), and 5 daughters (p. 90).

XIII. THOMAS CARR, of Ford, Marden, Crookham, &c.; 1577-1641; High Sheriff, 1629; married first, Isabella, daughter of Sir John Selby, of Twisell, Kt., and had issue:—

(1.) Peregrine Carr, died at one year.

(2.) William Carr, of Ford, Crookham, Marden, &c., J.P.; died 1641; married Susan, daughter of Thomas Hodgson, of Habburn, by a daughter of Sir William Bowyer, and left issue:

1. Thomas Carr, of Ford, Crookham, Marden, &c.; born 1634; slain (unmarried), at Alnwick, by his stepfather, John Radcliffe, 1660 or 1661.

2. Margaret; owned third of Ford, Crookham, &c.; married Arthur Babington, of Dunsden, and left female issue.

3. Elizabeth; owned third of Ford, Crookham, &c.; married Sir Francis Willis, ancestor of Delaval Maxlowe, Monson, Warwick, Hastings, Ashley, Waterford, Shrewsbury, Lothian, Londonderry, Melbourne, Bracewell, &c.; became by purchase owner of her Sisters' shares in Ford, Crookham, &c.

4. Susanna; owner of third of Ford, Crookham, &c.; married first, Thomas Winckle, of Harnham, and had issue; married secondly, John Carr.

After the death of William Carr, his widow, Susan, married John Radcliffe of Dilston, and had further issue, and after the execution of Radcliffe for the murder of his stepson, she married thirdly, Ralph Sadleth (of Norwick?)

(3.) John Carr; d. s. p. circ. 1626.

(4.) Elizabeth.

(5.) Susanna.

Deeds in the Record Office connected with the suit in Chancery of "Carr v. Bradford, 23 Oct. 1626," mention by name the three sons; and the "several daughters" of Thomas Carr, by Isabel Selby, his first wife. The same deeds recite the deed of entail that Thomas Carr executed in 1606, whereby he settled his estates on his son William and his heirs; with remainder to other sons and their heirs; with rem. to his brother William, of Esbol, and his heirs; with rem. to others of his name and kindred. These documents also mention, among other relations of Sir John Selby, Dame Margaret Selby his relict; Sir John Selby his son; and Isabel his daughter; whose marriage settlements with Thomas Carr are quoted; and who is mentioned in her Father's Will, 1595 (Durham.) "I pray my son to be good to my dau. Isabel; as my trust is in him."

* If Sir Robert Kerr, of Etal, was son-in-law of Thomas, Laird of Ford; one of these daughters should be his wife. If he, being son of Sir William Kerr, or Carr, of Sesford (deceased), was a cousin of Thomas, viz., a son of Jane his 2d wife, the widow of William Carr, of Scotland, Heline's statement is comprehensible; "Margaret dau. of the Laird of Ford, and sister to Sir Robert Carr." He is ancestor of Ernel, Gainsboro', Wolverton, Aldingham, Fife, &c.

2. William Carr (2nd son of William XII.), of Cornhill, Sunnylaws, Tweedmouth, and Eshot; styled in an indenture, at Ford, 10 August, 1603, "Gentleman of the Chamber to his Majestie;" inherited Cornhill under his father's will (inq, p.m., 1588-9) in reversion, on death of Dame Margaret Heron; married Elizabeth (Orde?) and had issue:—

William Carr, of Sunnylaws, and Heatherslaw; married Elizabeth . . . . . and had issue, Thomas Carr, of Heatherslaw and Sunnylaws, who married Isabella (believed to be a daughter and coheir of George Carr, of Ford Hill), but from them no issue is traceable.

3. Henry Carr; inherited Eshot, in reversion, on death of his great grandmother, Dame Margaret Heron, under his father's will. One of his sons, Robert, was of Eshot, 7 Sep., 1630, and the supposed father of William, of Eshot, 1668.
4. Dorothy
5. Margaret; married John Craster, of Craster (ancestor of Askew of Pallins Burn Park.)
6. Elizabeth; married William Carr, of Woodhall.
7. Jane; married Thomas Forster, of Brunton.
8. Elinor.

Thomas Carr (XIII) mar. 2d Jane, wid. of William Carr, or Kerr, of Scotland. In the Chancery Proceedings (Record Office) he appears to have taken part with his second wife, on behalf of their children, against those of the family of his first wife who seem to have considered that Isabel's portion of £1,000 gave her issue male sole claim to Ford—his son William brought an action against him: for it appears that after that he "cancelled" the male entail of 1606, he probably executed a second will, or other deeds, in favour of his chiidren by Jane. By her he left issue.—1. Thomas (XIV); 2. James; 3. George; 4. Margaret, who married, 1653, Henry Collingwood; a defendant in "Carr v. Bradford, 29 Jan., 1656," who claims the £500, which her father left her in his last will, "or some other deed," retained by the plaintiffs; and 5. Jane. Some provision for his first four children is traceable.

XIV. Thomas Carr, of Belford, Crookham, Marden, &c. The last heir male of the Herons, and Carrs, of Ford Castle; is called "of Hetherslaw" in a suit in which he and James, &c., are defendants with their mother Jane. On the day his half brother William went forth to the funeral of their Father (1641) he was for a time excluded from the castle. If, as it is stated, his nephew's death took place 18 Aug. 1660; and on 14 Nov. 1661 the petition of Sir Robert, Carr consequent thereto was referred to by the Attorney General; then he appears in a bond 3 Aug. 1661 as "Thomas Carr de le fforde Castle Arm," thus there is reason to believe he at one time actually had possession of his inheritance; in 1663, he quitted his claim rather than incur great liability in defending it against wealthy opponents.

On 1st September, 1664, a common recovery was agreed upon, and by indenture of that date (in Ford archives) Thomas Carr, of Belford, and Grace, his wife, accepted a moiety of Marden demesne for their lives, and the reversion of the other moiety on the death of Mrs. Salkeld, widow of William Carr (d. 1644.) The whole of Marden and the lands in Crookham then to descend in tail to the heirs of Thomas

2. William Carr (2nd son of William XII.) of Cornhill, Bannyclaws, Tweedmouth, and Eshot; styled in an indenture, at Ford, 10 August, 1609, "Gentleman of the Chamber in his Majestie's;" inherited Cornhill under his father's will (dev. pos., 1648-9) in reversion, on death of Dame Margaret Heron; married Elizabeth (Orde?) and had issue:—

William Carr, of Bannyclaws, and Heatherslaw; married Elizabeth . . . . . and had issue, Thomas Carr, of Heatherslaw and Bannyclaws, who married Isabella (believed to be a daughter and co-heir of George Carr, of Ford Hill), but from them no issue is traceable.

3. Henry Carr; inherited Eshot, in reversion, on death of his great grandmother, Dame Margaret Heron, under his father's will. One of his sons, Robert, was of Eshot, 7 Sep., 1630, and the supposed father of William, of Eshot, 1666.

4. Dorothy.

5. Margaret; married John Chester, of Chester (ancestor of Andrew of Fallins Burn Park).

6. Elizabeth; married William Carr, of Woodhall.

7. Jane; married Thomas Forster, of Brunton.

8. Eleanor.

Thomas Carr (XIII) mar. 24 June, wid. of William Carr, or Kerr, of Scotland. In the Chancery Proceedings (Second Office) he appears to have taken part with his second wife, on behalf of their children, against those of the family of his first wife who seem to have considered that Isabel's portion of £1,000 gave her issue male sole claim to Ford—his son William brought an action against him: for it appears that after that he "miscalled" the male entail of 1600, he probably executed a second will, or other deeds, in favour of his children by Jane. By her he left issue:—1. Thomas (XIV); 2. James; 3. George; 4. Margaret, who married, 1653, Henry Collingwood; a defendant in "Carr v. Bradford, 22 Jan., 1690," who claims the £500, which her father left her in his last will, "or some other deed," retained by the plaintiffs; and 5. Jane. Some provision for his first four children is traceable.

XIV. Thomas Carr, of Bedford, Crookham, Marden, &c. The last heir male of the Herons, and Carrs, of Ford Castle; is called "of Heatherslaw" in a suit in which he and James, &c., are defendants with their mother Jane. On the day his half brother William went forth to the funeral of their Father (1641) he was for a time excluded from the castle. It is said is stated, his nephew's death took place 18 Aug. 1660; and on 14 Nov. 1661 the petition of Sir Robert Carr consequent thereto was referred to by the Attorney General; then he appears in a bond 3 Aug. 1661 as "Thomas Carr de le Forde Castle Arm," thus there is reason to believe he at one time actually had possession of his inheritance; in 1663, he quitted his claim rather than incur great liability in defending it against wealthy opponents.

On 1st September, 1664, a common recovery was suffered upon, and by indenture of that date (in Ford archives) Thomas Carr, of Bedford, and Grace, his wife, accepted a moiety of Marden demesne for their lives, and the reversion of the other moiety on the death of Alice, Baldock, widow of William Carr (d. 1641). The whole of Marden and the lands in Crookham then to descend in tail to the heirs of Thomas

Carr, of Belford, and the remainder of the Ford estates were to be divided between the three sisters of the late Thomas Carr, of Ford.

In a list of interrogatories to be administered to witnesses in the case of Davison v. Blake, dated 14th Oct. 1679, and preserved in proceedings of Court of Chancery, the following question occurs:—"Also doe you know y^t^ ye right and title of ye s^d^. Manor of Foord and ye appurtenances and ye right of presentation to ye s^d^, church upon ye death of ye s^d^. Thomas Carr ye grandson were in controversy between ye sisters of ye s^d^. Thomas Carr and one Thomas Carr uncle of ye said Thomas Carr ye grandson" &c. &c.

Thomas Carr, of Belford, was buried at Belford, 10 April, 1702; his wife Grace, (widow of Thos Armorer), survived him and died 1710. Her will, dated 9 March, 1710, was proved at Durham. In it she mentions her grand children the Alders, and her great grandson William Smart (XVII).

XV. Grace Carr (d. and h.) of Belford West Hall, Crookham, Marden, &c., married at Bambrough, 14 Sep., 1685, William Alder, of Kirknewton, Chamberlain of Almnurick in 1614. (Tate's Alnwick) second son of Robert Alder, of Alnham, second son of George Alder, of Prendwick, second son of Francis Alder, of Hobberlaw ("a pele of considerable strength" in possession of the Alders for nearly three centuries from 1456.) The Alder pedigree in the Heralds College, shews marriages with Fenwick of Stanton, Heron of Bokenfield, Lisle of Felton Forster, of Newham, &c., &c. George Alder, of Nunriding, elder brother of Robert, married (contract dated 13 Oct., 1683) Frances d. of George Reveley, an ancestor of the Dukes of Northumberland (Raine's N. Durham.)—Issue:—

1. Eleanor Alder (XVI.)
2. Thomas Alder, of Belford West Hall, Crookham, and Marden, in 1711, ancestor of Thorp, Balfour, Charlton, Dickson, &c., married first, Margaret Forster, of Warnford, and secondly, Sarah, daughter of .. Burn (of Broomrigg?), and had issue:—

1. Ralph nil. ob. s.p., 1758.
2. William Alder, of Horncliffe Hall, Crookham, Marden, &c., 1734-1800, married Eleanor Graham, of Glororum. Sold Marden October, 1767, to Dr. Adam Askew, of Pallinsburn. He left issue.

   William Alder, married Mary Anne Hanson, Countess of Portsmouth.

3. Thomas Alder, of Morris Hall, baptized 1744, married Mary Grey, of Shoston, and left issue.

XVI. Eleanor Alder (eldest child) married 6 February, 1704-5, at Belford, John Smart, descended from the Rev. Peter Smart, elected from Westminster to Ch. Ch., Oxon, as student, 1588, Rector of Bowden, High Commissioner for the province of York, who died Senior Preb. of Durham, circa 1652. Their son

XVII. William Smart, of Belford, Netherton, and the Manor of Upper Trewhitt, als. Trewhitt, baptized at Belford, 10 December, 1705, is mentioned in the will of his great grandmother Grace Carr. The burial-place of this family from 1685-1784 was at the entrance to the chancel in Belford Church.

Carr, of Belford, and the remainder of the Ford estates were to be divided between the three sisters of the late Thomas Carr, of Ford.

In a list of interrogatories to be administered to witnesses in the case of Davison v. Dixie, dated 14th Oct. 1679, and preserved in proceedings of Court of Chancery, the following question occurs:—"Also doe you know ye right and title of ye s^d. Manor of Ford and ye appurtenances and ye right of presentation to ye s^d. church upon ye death of ye s^d. Thomas Carr ye grandson were in controversy between ye sisters of ye s^d. Thomas Carr and one Thomas Carr nuncle of ye said Thomas Carr ye grandson" &c. &c.

Thomas Carr, of Belford, was buried at Belford, 10 April, 1702; his wife Grace, (widow of Thos. Ainsorge), survived him and died 1710; Her will, dated 6 March, 1710, was proved at Durham. In it she mentions her grand children the Alders, and her great grandson William Smart (XVII).

XV. Grace Carr (d. and h.) of Belford West Hall, Crookham, Marden, &c., married at Bamburgh, 14 Sep., 1695, William Alder, of Kirkharton, Chamberlain of Alnwick in 1614. (Tate's Alnwick) second son of Robert Alder, of Alnham, second son of George Alder, of Trewhwick, second son of Francis Alder, of Hobberlaw ("a pele of considerable strength") in possession of the Alders for nearly three centuries from 1420. The Alder pedigree in the Heralds College, shows marriages with Renwick of Stanton, Heron of Bokenfield, Leslie of Fetton Forster, of Newham, &c., &c. George Alder, of Nunwhiting, elder brother of Robert, married (contract dated 18 Oct. 1683) Frances d. of George Revely, an ancestor of the Dukes of Northumberland (Raine's N. Durham.)—Issue:—

1. Eleanor Alder (XVI.)
2. Thomas Alder, of Belford West Hall, Crookham, and Marden, in 1711, ancestor of Thorp, Halfom, Charlton, Dickson, &c., married first, Margaret Forster, of Warnford, and secondly, Sarah, daughter of .. Burn (of Broomrigg?), and had issue:—

1. Ralph ob^t. s. p., 1756.
2. William Alder, of Hornclifte Hall, Crookham, Marden, &c., 1731-1800, married Eleanor Graham, of Gforrum. Said Marden October, 1767, to Dr. Adam Askew, of Pallinsburn. He left issue.

William Alder, married Mary Anne Hanson, Countess of Portsmouth.

3. Thomas Alder, of Morris Hall, baptized 1744, married Mary Grey, of Sbouton, and left issue.

XVI. Eleanor Alder (eldest child) married 6 February, 1704-5, at Belford, John Smart, descended from the Rev. Peter Smart, elected from Westminster to Ch. Ch., Oxon, as student, 1588, Rector of Bowden, High Commissioner for the province of York, who died Senior Prob. of Durham, circa 1652. Their son

XVII. William Smart, of Belford, Netherton, and the Manor of Upper Trewhitt, ob. Trewhitt, baptized at Belford, 10 December, 1703, is mentioned in the will of his great grandmother Grace Carr. The burial-place of this family from 1658-1784 was at the entrance to the chancel in Belford Church.

A Brass Plate—In memory of Samuel eldest | son of Samuel and Mary Heaven | of Lintetton in this parish. A young man who, favored God from his youth and who | having gone to the South of Africa for | the purpose of making known the Gospel to the natives and promoting their | civilization was cut off at the village | of Beaufort before he arrived at the | intended scene of his labours on the | 1st day of May 1822 aged 20 years. | Also of Elizabeth Mary | their only daughter whose mortal | remains are interred beneath | this tablet; she was an example of unaffected piety, of devotion to | the comfort and welfare of others | in preference to her own and of | enlightened attachment to the Church, she died on the 15th day of November 1834 Aged 28 years.

Underneath lie the Remains of Betty, the wife of William Burgess, Gent. who Departed this life June 22nd 1803.[1]

Extremal S. Wall.—Near this Place | lieth the Remains of | Sarah Bartlet Wife of | James Bartlet of Hinton | and Daughter of Thomas | and Hester Heaven of | Lintetton who Departed | this Life the 28th day of Nov[r] | 1785 Aged 28 years.

On the south-bend side of N. Porch, stand worn, in Norman French. Whoever shall say a Paternoster and Ave Maria for the soule, for Philippe de Saincest (?) and Christiane, shall have 40 days of pardon. Amen.[2]

LINCOLNSHIRE WILLS. First Series, A.D. 1500—1600. By the Rev. A. R. Maddison, F.S.A. Lincoln, 8vo.

The editor of this series of Abstracts of Lincolnshire wills, for wills they are not, as the title would lead us to suppose, begins his introduction with a lament, in which we heartily join, that very little has been done towards bringing out a history of his County worthy of a Shire whose sons have occupied no undistinguished place in the annals of their country. To the future historian of Lincolnshire these abstracts of wills are offered as a ready source of information to be drawn upon for its genealogical and ecclesiastical history. As to how far they will serve these purposes Mr. Maddison's preface is but a feeble guide. His principle, so far as we understand it, has been to leave out the most important families, viz. those of Baronial rank, and those whose names occur in Inquisitions Post Mortem, the Testa de Nevill, and the Rotuli

LINCOLNSHIRE WILLS. First Series, A.D. 1500—1600. By the Rev. A. H. Maddison, F.S.A. Lincoln, 8vo.

The editor of this series of abstracts of Lincolnshire wills, for wills they are not, as the title would lead us to suppose, begins his introduction with a lament, in which we heartily join, that very little has been done towards bringing out a history of this County worthy of a Shire whose sons have occupied no undistinguished place in the annals of their country. To the future historian of Lincolnshire these abstracts of wills are offered as a ready source of information to be drawn upon for its genealogical and ecclesiastical history. As to how far they will serve those purposes Mr. Maddison's preface is but a feeble guide. His principle, so far as we understand it, has been to leave out the most important families, viz. those of Baronial rank, and those whose names occur in Inquisitions Post Mortem, the Testa de Nevill, and the Rotuli

Hundredorum. The wills of those given have been chosen apparently as those of "County Families" a name borrowed from Walford, and, if taken in the sense of that author, include those of Tom, Dick, and Harry, et hoc genus omne. Had Mr. Maddison been content to print a calendar of all the wills proved at Lincoln during the 16th century he would have given a contribution of far greater value to the county historian of the future than his present labours can do. In so far, from a genealogist's point of view, they have been wasted. The genealogical historian must of necessity make the search all over again before he can be certain that he has noted every will likely to illustrate the particular pedigree upon which he is at work. Apart from this opinion, Mr. Maddison deserves our thanks for having produced a book of exceedingly interesting notes, and his introduction exhibits a knowledge of Lincolnshire genealogy far in advance of any other writer who has attempted to deal with it. His notes on the families of Amcotts, Skipwith, Bolle, Cust, Ayscough, Langton, Welby, Dymoke, and Meres, and many more, are well worth reading and remembering. The last six pages of the introduction in which a sketch is given of the changes wrought during the Reformation and Commonwealth periods are the most interesting in the book; they show that the editor well grasps his subject. We desire to impress on the amateur genealogist that Hobson's choice, "That or none," is not now sufficient. "All or none" is the requirement of the pedigree hunter of to-day.

THE CISTERCIAN ABBEY OF STRATA FLORIDA, by Stephen W. Williams, F.R.I.B.A, London (Whiting and Co.), 8vo.

In an interesting form Mr. Williams has given us a very complete history of the Abbey Church of Strata Florida, in the county of Cardigan. The first few chapters are devoted to a somewhat lengthy account of Rhys ap Tewdwr, sovereign of South Wales, his son, Gruffydd ap Rhys, and his grandson, Rhys ap Gruffydd, who are all styled the founders of Strata Florida. This is certainly misleading as he clearly points out that the actual founder of the Abbey was Rhys ap Gruffydd, whose father does not appear to have had much to do with either the Abbey or Ystrad Flur. The latter building was a house for Monks, founded by Rhys ap Tewdwr, and was two miles south-west of Strata Florida. Being destroyed, as many suppose by fire, there is no doubt that a portion of the débris was used in the erection of the Abbey. Strata Florida was founded in the twelfth century, and is thought to have been inhabited by an order of Cistercian monks. The Abbey seems to have suffered severely on several occasions by fire. The first, there is little doubt, was accidental, and the second is accounted for by a tradition that King Edward I being incensed at the Abbot failing to render his submission with the principal men of Cardigan, ordered the Monastery to be burned. After each of these misfortunes the building was repaired, but was again devastated in the rebellion of Owain Glendower in the reign of Henry V., and never thoroughly recovered this last disaster. In 1254 we are told of the purchase of the great bell, for which 3 score and 37 marks, and 2 kine were paid. Up to the last year of Owain Glendower's life Strata Florida had its own garrison for an order was issued from the Council

THE CISTERCIAN ABBEY OF STRATA FLORIDA, by Stephen W. Williams, F.R.I.B.A., London (Whiting and Co.), 8vo.

The first few chapters are devoted to a somewhat lengthy account of Rhys ap Tewdwr, sovereign of South Wales, his son, Gruffydd ap Rhys, and his grandson, Rhys ap Gruffydd, who are all styled the founders of Strata Florida. This is certainly misleading as he clearly points out that the actual founder of the Abbey was Rhys ap Gruffydd, whose father does not appear to have had much to do with either the Abbey or Ystrad Fflur. The latter building was a house for Monks, founded by Rhys ap Tewdwr, and was two miles south-west of Strata Florida. Being destroyed, as many suppose by fire, there is no doubt that a portion of the débris was used in the erection of the Abbey. Strata Florida was founded in the twelfth century, and is thought to have been inhabited by an order of Cistercian monks. The Abbey seems to have suffered severely on several occasions by fire. The first, there is little doubt, was accidental, and the second is accounted for by a tradition that King Edward I being incensed at the Abbot failing to render his submission with the principal men of Cardigan, ordered the Monastery to be burned. After each of these misfortunes the building was repaired, but was again devastated in the rebellion of Owain Glendower in the reign of Henry V, and never thoroughly recovered this last disaster. In 1294 we read of the purchase of the great bell, for which 3 score and 37 marks, and 3 kine were paid. Up to the last year of Owain Glendower's life Strata Florida had its own garrison for an order was issued from the Council held at the Monastery of the Friars Preachers in London that 40 men-at-arms and 80 archers should be placed there to protect that part of Wales during the first expedition into France by Henry V., and among the excavations have been found spurs, of early 15th century pattern, and part of a set of manacles.

There seem to have been black sheep even among this holy order of monks, for we hear of spurious coins being manufactured by them, but the delinquents were happily discovered and punished.

The principal feature of the book is the account of the excavations and the architecture, and what adds considerably to the interest are the very excellent illustrations, of which Mr. Williams has given us a great number. In the early part of this century were found near the ruins two silver seals, one having the arms of the Abbey engraved upon it, and the other an impression of the Virgin and Child, this latter is now at the British Museum. A very interesting relic of the Abbey is still preserved in the family of Powell of Nanteos. It is a curious drinking cup, supposed to possess miraculous healing powers, and was often borrowed by the sick; some valuable object being left as a pledge, to be redeemed when the cup was returned. This custom holds good to the present day, and the cup is constantly sent for. The patient has drink some wine or liquor from it, and some, not satisfied with this even nibble off pieces from the edge, which accounts for its present unshapely appearance, and there are a number of curious receipts at Nanteos, having inscribed upon them the nature of the disease from which many have been cured.

Perhaps the most valuable discovery made in excavating the ruins is the tile pavement, found in good order under the flooring, in which are several antique specimens of tiles, evidently of early English manufacture. The nave-arcades must have been a striking feature in the architecture, and a drawing is given showing the appearance they presented when in situ, Mr. Williams gives as a frontispiece a fine illustration of the beautiful arched doorway, so well known to antiquarians, and which is still to be seen.

The dissolution of the monastery is said to have taken place in the reign of Henry VIII, though the church was still used for divine service as late as the reign of Charles I, when it finally became a ruin. In the appendix are extracts, charters, and documents relating to the Abbey, and these show how thorough the search has been to produce accuracy and completeness. Mr. Williams, under whose supervision and at whose instigation the excavations have been carried out, tells us there is still much to be brought to light, and we sincerely hope that he will be able to finish what he has so ably begun.

A Dictionary of Heraldry, by Charles Norton Elvin, M.A. London, (Kent & Co.) Royal 8vo.

The aim of this book, Mr. Elvin tells us, is to give a list of the terms used in Heraldry, with their appropriate Illustrations, and this he has succeeded in doing in a concise and handy form, giving almost every conceivable charge to be found in ancient or modern Authorities. A book of this kind is a valuable supplement to works dealing with the antiquity and history of the Science of Coat Armour, and must represent a vast amount of useful labour.

Although great trouble has evidently been taken with the numerous illustrations, of which there are between two and three thousand, yet we think many of them are not as good as they might be; the drawing of the animate charges being especially weak.

We sincerely hope that such a capital Dictionary may not be the means of helping charlatans to manufacture a fresh supply of bogus coats, to meet the demands of any would be Armiger, but fall into the hands of those who are most likely to appreciate it, namely the Student, Herald Painter, and Engraver, whom the compiler particularly addresses in his introduction.

Notes and Queries.

FITZHERBERT.—As an instance of the many difficulties which beset a genealogist in his researches, I mention the following. William Fitzherbert, M.A., Clerk, Subdean, and one of the Minor Canons of St. Paul's Cathedral, lies buried in the crypt of the said Cathedral, where, on the flat stone which covers his grave, is the following inscription:—

Revd. Gul: Fitzherbert,
A. M.
nuper Subdeanus
Annosque amplius quinquaginta
Unus e Minoribus Canonicis
hujus Ecclesiæ,
Ob. 2 Oct., 1797,
Æ. 84.

This shows that his birth occurred in the year 1713. In the Gentleman's Magazine, a very useful, but somewhat inaccurate book of reference, his death is recorded on the same date as that given on his tombstone, but his age is stated to be eighty-seven, in which case he would have been born in 1710. Again, the only entry in the books of the Universities that at all approaches either of these dates, is at New College, Oxon, where we find that William Fitzherbert matriculated 11 December, 1734 as "Gen-fil," aged nineteen years, his father being Richard Fitzherbert, of Blandford, co. Dorset.[1] Thus we have three different dates to choose from for his birth, viz. 1710, 1713, and 1715.

His will, of which the following is an abstract, although very full, is a little puzzling.

1796, May 27, Rev. William Fitzherbert, M.A., Clerk, &c. Thomas Woodhouse Fitzherbert, Jonas Fitzherbert, and Alicia, now the wife of Lieutenant George Burgoyne Salte, R.N., the sons and daughters of my late nephew Rear Admiral Thomas Fitzherbert. Samuel Fitzherbert. My two nieces Esther and Sarah two other daughters of my said brother Thomas (this being the first mention of a brother Thomas.) Proved in P. C. C. 23 October, 1797.

Now it is evident that Esther and Sarah were the only daughters of "my said brother Thomas," as a commission was issued from the P. C. C., 20 June, 1789, to Hester and Sarah Fitzherbert, spinsters, to administer the goods of their father Thomas Fitzherbert late of Blandford, co., Dorset, widower (who died in the year 1789, aged about 80.) Again, Thomas Fitzherbert, of High Canons, was a nephew of Admiral Thomas, who died 1794, and, therefore, must have been grand nephew of Rev. William. In this case he would have been only 31 or 36 years younger than his great uncle, being born in 1746. I should be glad if any light could be thrown on this family, as little seems to be known about them, although the progenitor of this William Fitzherbert (if son of Richard of Blandford), was the celebrated Richard Fitzherbert, Rector of Cucklington, co., Somerset, and Archdeacon of Dorset, 1621, whose descendants held by patent the office of Registrar of the Archdeaconry of Dorset.

SCUTUM.

BENNET OF CHESTERS, CO., ROXBURGH.—I shall be glad if anyone can help me with information concerning this family. Up to the end of the last century these Bennets had been lairds of Chesters for some considerable time, and were supposed to be of the same stock as the Earls of Tankerville. They were also said to have been related to the Bennets, of Marlfield, and Bennets, of Grubbet, but in what degree I have been unable to discover. In 1787 the estate was sold to an ancestor of the present owner, and I believe the male line was then extinct. INVESTIGATOR, United University Club, S.W.

SALT OFFICERS AND COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS.—I shall be obliged if anyone can tell me where to find the appointments of Salt Officers and Collectors of Customs.

WHITMORE.—Among the many prominent actors in the French and Indian Wars in America, was General Edward Whitmore, who was at the taking of Louisburg. Can anyone give me the names of his descendants, and any facts connected with them? W. H. W.

On p. 27 it is stated that the extracts from the Registers of Wolston cum Brandon are communicated by George Harvey Johnston. This is an error, and I shall be glad to correct it if the contributor will kindly send in his name to me. THE EDITOR.

WHITMORE.—Among the many prominent actors in the French and Indian Wars in America, was General Edward Whitmore, who was at the taking of Louisburg. Can anyone give me the names of his descendants, and any facts connected with them? W. H. W.

On p. 27 it is stated that the extracts from the Registers of Wolston cum Brandon are communicated by George Harvey Johnston. This is an error, and I shall be glad to correct it if the contributor will kindly send in his name to me. THE EDITOR.

THE FAMILY OF LINCOLN.

In a previous paper[1] I had occasion to refer to the early history of the Lincoln family, and produced sundry fresh items of information which led me to reject to a large extent previous speculations on the subject, and to reconstruct the pedigree on a fresh basis, while retaining some few of the old notions. But it appears necessary to carry the process of rejection still further.

It will be recollected that Alfred de Lincoln was succeeded in his great Lincolnshire barony by Alan de Lincoln, and that most writers have assumed the latter to have been brother of the former, but that Mr. Freeman considers Alan to have been rather the son of Alfred, because he discovered a notice of Robert son of Alfred de Lincoln, who would, therefore, hardly have been succeeded by a brother.

This Robert and his father were however located in Dorset, and it has always seemed difficult to account for the migration of the family from Lincoln to the southern county. But Mr. Thomas Bond, in his addenda to the last edition of Hutchins' Dorset (i. pp. 609, 718, 719), proposes to surmount this difficulty by suggesting that Alfred de Lincoln, "the favoured Englishman," as Mr. Freeman calls him, married the widow of Hugh FitzGrip, whose estates in Dorset are set out in Domesday Book (p. 83 b.), because it can be shown from the Black Book of the Exchequer and from Testa de Nevill that the family of Lincoln succeeded to most of those estates. There is no actual proof of the marriage, but Mr. Bond refers to a charter of King Henry I. in 1106, confirming a gift by Alfredus de Nicola (i.e., Lincoln) to the monks of Tewkesbury of "two hides of Purbeck and one hide with two tithes."[2] I find also that in the following year, 1107, Henry I. again confirmed the same gift in the same words, which are not very precise. They are elucidated by a confirmation charter of Roger, Bishop of Salisbury, in 1109, in which the tithes are described as follows:—"Duas decimas de elemosina Aelfredi de Nichola, vidlt. decimam de Tachetona et de la Harpine."[3] On further reference to Domesday (p. 84), it is found that the widow FitzGrip had estates in Herpere and Tacatone; and she is also returned as holding two carucates in the "Hundred of Porbiche" under William de Braiose (p. 82).

Here is presumptive evidence of the supposed marriage, but I have shown that Alfred de Lincoln possessed other estates in Dorset which Dugdale prints only one of the charters of Edward I., omitting No. 2, which inspects the charter of 1107; and in the middle of No. 16 he interposes a misleading reference to the confirmation of Henry IV. Had he really quoted from this last, he would have given us both the charters of Edward I., which were dated at the same place and time, viz., at Carlisle, 1st July (1300). In confirming the charter of 1107, Edward I. wrongly speaks of Henry I. as his proavus, which term he usually applies to Henry II. Several other charters of Henry I. are confirmed by his successors, besides those mentioned above.

THE FAMILY OF LINCOLN.

In a previous paper[1] I had occasion to refer to the early history of the Lincoln family, and produced sundry fresh items of information which led me to reject to a large extent previous speculations on the subject, and to reconstruct the pedigree on a fresh basis, while retaining some few of the old notions. But it appears necessary to carry the process of rejection still further.

It will be recollected that Alfred de Lincoln was succeeded in his great Lincolnshire barony by Alan de Lincoln, and that most writers have assumed the latter to have been brother of the former, but that Mr. Freeman considers Alan to have been rather the son of Alfred, because he discovered a notice of Robert son of Alfred de Lincoln, who would, therefore, hardly have been succeeded by a brother.

This Robert and his father were however located in Dorset, and it has always seemed difficult to account for the migration of the family from Lincoln to the southern county. But Mr. Thomas found, in his addenda to the last edition of Hutchins' Dorset (i. pp. 609, 718, 719), proposes to surmount this difficulty by supposing that Alfred de Lincoln, "the favoured Englishman," as Mr. Freeman calls him, married the widow of Hugh Fitzgrip, whose estates in Dorset are set out in Domesday Book (p. 83 b.), because it can be shown from the Black Book of the Exchequer and from Teste de Nevill that the family of Lincoln succeeded to most of those estates. There is no actual proof of the marriage, but Mr. Hunt refers to a charter of King Henry I. in 1109, confirming a gift by Alfredus de Nicola (i.e., Lincoln) to the monks of Twyneham of "six hides of Purbeck and one hide with two tithes."[2] I find also that in the following year, 1110, Henry I. again confirmed the same gift in the same words, which are not very precise. They are elucidated by a confirmation charter of Roger, Bishop of Salisbury, in 1109, in which the tithes are described as follows:—"Duas decimas de elemosina Aelfredi de Nicola, videlicet, decimam de Tuchetona et de la Harpina."[3] On further reference to Domesday (p. 84), it is found that the widow Fitzgrip had estates in Harpere and Tuchetone; and she is also returned as holding two carucates in the "Hundred of Forbiche" under William de Braiose (p. 82).

Here is presumptive evidence of the supposed marriage, but I have shown that Alfred de Lincoln possessed other estates in Dorset which Dugdale plausibly one of the charters of Edward I. omitting No. 3, which imposes the charter of 1107; and in the middle of No. 18 the interposes a misleading reference to the confirmation of Henry IV. Itself is really quoted from this last, he would have given us both the charters of Edward I., which were dated at the same place and time, viz., at Cadiale, 1st July (1300). In consequence the charter of 1107, Edward I. wrongly speaks of Henry I. as his grandfather, which term he usually applies to Henry II. Several other charters of Henry I. are confirmed by his successors, besides those mentioned above.

did not belong to the widow, such as Gillingham and Brugia.[1] Moreover, Mr. Bond has given a number of interesting particulars relative to East Holme, where there was a cell to the priory of Montacute, and he presumes this cell to have been founded by Alfred de Lincoln, because the prior was bound "to find four monks chanting throughout the year for the souls of Aluered, de Lyncoln, and of his progenitors and successors,"[2] no mention being made of the widow, though "Holne" was part of the priory's lands in Purbeck, where her two carucates were situate. But I believe these were not identical with the two hides given by Alfred, for an undated charter of Henry I. confirms "duas hidas in Porbica de feodo Roberti de Clavilla," which seems to show by what tenure Alfred held them. Turning to Domesday, we find that Walter de Clavile held two and a quarter hides in Holne, or Holme in the Isle of Purbeck. If this were the locality of Alfred's two hides, it is evident that he did not acquire them by the alleged marriage, and we need not wonder that the monks were not bound to pray for the widow.[3]

In the Black Book (Hearne, p. 88) there is a list of the Knights who held fees of Glastonbury Abbey in the time of King Henry I., including "Aluredus Senior de Lincoln," who held five knights' fees. These may have belonged to the widow, for in Domesday she is returned as holding Odiete and part of Adford, in Dorset, of that abbey; but an Aluredus is also returned as holding part of Adford, in Dorset, and Sapeswich, in Somerset, of the same abbey; so that it is not safe to assume that Alfred de Lincoln became tenant to the abbey in right of his wife. Thus the only known fact which would corroborate the inference above referred to cannot be thoroughly relied on, as there is apparently nothing to show that Alfred held any of her other estates except those above mentioned. In the reign of Henry II., according to the Black Book, the fees of Alfred Senior belonged to another "Alfredus," who was doubtless the son of Robert de Lincoln, son of Alfred Senior.

There is, therefore, some room for doubt whether the Lincoln family acquired their lands in Dorset by the supposed marriage, for the widow may have died without heirs, and her lands with others may have been given by the King to Alfred. Yet Mr. Eyton, in his "Key to Domesday, Dorset" (p. 78), without qualification and without giving any reasons, boldly states that Alfred married the widow, and he describes Alfred as "her second husband."[4] If this

[3] Mr. Bond has kindly sent me a table showing which of the widow's lands are known to have come to the Lincoln family. The descent of many of them is not made out. Of those which can be traced the greater portion went to the Lincolns, and the rest to the family of Goviz.

[4] In the same work Mr. Eyton calls Alfred "an Anjovin," but gives no reason for the appellation. We know from his Lincoln MSS. that he was of opinion that Ivo Taillebois, Alfred de Lincoln, and Alan were brothers, and that Ivo came from Anjou, but both these ideas have been shown to be groundless. (See Vol. v. pp. 154, 163.) Still it may be remarked that the name of "Alveredus" was not so undoubtedly Anglo-Saxon as Mr. Freeman supposes. In the charter of Richard II., Duke of Normandy, to the monastery of Fécamp, about the year 1001, the name of "Alveredus Vicecomes" occurs among the Norman Viscounts who attest it. The same name was not uncommon in Normandy after the Conquest, and is translated did not belong to the widow, such as Gillingham and Burgin.[1] Moreover, Mr. Round has given a number of interesting particulars relative to East Holme, where there was a cell to the priory of Almenêches, and he presumes this cell to have been founded by Alfred de Lincoln, because the poor was bound "to find four monks chanting throughout the year for the souls of Alnored, de Lyncoln, and of his progenitors and successors,"[2] no mention being made of the widow, though "Holme" was part of the priory's lands in Purbeck, where her two estates were situate. But I believe these were not identical with the two hides given by Alfred, for on undated charter of Henry I. confirms "duas hidas in Parbina de feodo Roberti de Olevilla," which seems to show by what tenure Alfred held them. Turning to Domesday, we find that Walter de Olivile held two and a quarter hides in Holme, or Holme in the Isle of Purbeck. If this were the locality of Alfred's two hides, it is evident that he did not acquire them by the alleged marriage, and we need not wonder that the monks were not bound to pray for the widow.[3]

In the Black Book (Hearne, p. 88) there is a list of the Knights who held fees of Glastonbury Abbey in the time of King Henry I., including "Alnredus Senior de Lincoln," who held two Knights' fees. These may have belonged to the widow, for in Domesday she is returned as holding Odiete and part of Adford, in Dorset, of that abbey; but an Alnredus is also returned as holding part of Adford, in Dorset, and Sapowick, in Somerset, of the same abbey; so that it is not safe to assume that Alfred de Lincoln became tenant to the abbey in right of his wife. Thus the only known fact which would corroborate the inference above referred to cannot be thoroughly relied on, as there is apparently nothing to show that Alfred held any of her other estates except those above mentioned. (See Vol. v. p. 153, 1883.) Still it may be remarked that the name of "Alnoredus" was not undoubtedly Anglo-Saxon as Mr. Eyton supposes. In the charter of Richard II., Duke of Normandy, to the monastery of Fécamp, about the year 1001, the name of "Alnoredus Vicecomes" occurs among the Norman Vicecomes who attest it. view should prove to be the true one, then Alfred set a precedent to his granddaughter the Countess Lucy by marrying three times; for if Thorold the Sheriff was his son by an English wife before the Conquest, we may still retain Mr. Freeman's view that Alfred married a Norman lady directly after the Conquest and that Alan was their son. And if the supposed marriage with the widow FitzGrip took place at all, it was after 1086, and Robert would be her son.

I have thus endeavoured to state all the facts relating to the early members of the Lincoln family, as well as the theories which have been built on them. But one fact has not received the attention it deserves. In the Pipe Roll of 31 Henry I. both an Alfred and a Robert de Lincoln are mentioned as having been pardoned certain sums due from them, evidently as landowners in Dorset; and at the same time Alfred paid a fine for having the manor of Puleham in that county as long as he should live. I merely noted these references to Alfred in my original paper because, influenced by the existing theories, I concluded that he was a later Alfred, the successor of Robert, with whom I was not concerned, and this may have been the case.

On reconsideration, however, I feel bound to point out that there is an alternative. It may be strongly suspected that the Alfred and Robert thus mentioned in 1130 were identical with the "Alveredus de Lincol' et Robertus filius ejus" who gave Gillingham and Brugia to Montacute priory, as they are mentioned after Robert de la Haye in the charter of Henry II.;[1] and that the description given by Ordericus Vitalis of "Rodbertus Alveredi de Lincolia filius," in 1138, really applies to these two. Now, as I have shown that the Alfred de Lincoln of Domesday died before the compilation of the Lindsey Survey (1112-1119), it would follow, if this view be correct, that Mr. Freeman is mistaken in identifying Robert as a son of the Domesday Alfred, and his argument that Alan de Lincoln was necessarily the son, rather than the brother, and heir of that Alfred, would fall to the ground, were it not supported by the fact that Alan lived till thirty years or more after his predecessor in title.

Alan de Lincoln is also mentioned in the roll of 1130, under Lincolnshire, and it was doubtless these notices of an Alfred and an Alan as living at the same time, taken in connexion with the dubious reference to Alan in 1082, which induced Dugdale erroneously to describe the Domesday Alfred as a contemporary of Alan, and Stapleton to assume that they were brothers.

This view of the case further leads one to question whether the Alfred who gave lands and tithes in Dorset to the monastery of Cranborne or Tewkesbury, in or before 1100, is not more likely to have been the Dorset Alfred of 1130 than the Lincoln Alfred of 1086. Primâ facie, a man whose large barony was situate in the north, would hardly have shown so much partiality for southern monasteries.

"Auvré" by modern French writers. It is curious that, judging from the Domesday lists, the name of Alfred was not so comparatively popular in England as might have been expected. It is, however, significant that one of the charters of Henry I. and the charter of the Bishop of Salisbury give the Latinised Anglo-Saxon form of the name, Aelfredus, as above, though in the charter of 1107, the Norman-Latin form Alueredus occurs. Norman writers would hardly convert a Norman name into a Saxon one, though they might do the reverse.

view should prove to be the true one, then Alfred set a precedent to his granddaughter the Countess Lacy by marrying three times; for if Thorold the Sheriff was his son by an English wife before the Conquest, we may still retain Mr. Freeman's view that Alfred married a Norman lady directly after the Conquest and that Alan was their son. And if the supposed marriage with the widow Fitzgrip took place at all, it was after 1086, and Ingelgar would be her son.

I have thus endeavoured to state all the facts relating to the early members of the Lincoln family, as well as the theories which have been built on them. But one fact has not received the attention it deserves. In the Pipe Roll of 31 Henry I. both an Alfred and a Robert de Lincoln are mentioned as having been pardoned certain sums due from them, evidently as landowners in Dorset; and at the same time Alfred paid a fine for having the manor of Tuleham in that county as long as he should live. On reconsideration, however, I feel bound to point out that there is an alternative. It may be strongly suspected that the Alfred and Robert thus mentioned in 1130 were identical with the "Alveredus de Lincol' et Robertus filius ejus" who gave Gillingham and Dingin to Montacute priory, as they are mentioned after Robert de la Haye in the charter of Henry II.[1] and that the description given by Ordericus Vitalis of "Rodbertus Alveredi de Lincolia filius," in 1138, really applies to these two. Now, as I have shown that the Alfred de Lincoln of Domesday died before the compilation of the Lindsey Survey (1112-1119), it would follow, if this view be correct, that Mr. Freeman is mistaken in identifying Robert as a son of the Domesday Alfred, and his argument that Alan de Lincoln was necessarily the son, rather than the brother, and heir of that Alfred, would fall to the ground, were it not supported by the fact that Alan lived till thirty years or more after his predecessor in title.

Alan de Lincoln is also mentioned in the roll of 1130, under Lincolnshire, and it was doubtless these notices of an Alfred and an Alan as living at the same time, taken in connexion with the dubious reference to Alan in 1082, which induced Dugdale erroneously to describe the Domesday Alfred as a contemporary of Alan, and Stapleton to assume that they were brothers.

This view of the case further leads one to question whether the Alfred who gave lands and tithes in Dorset to the monastery of Cranborne or Tewkesbury, in or before 1100, is not more likely to have been the Dorset Alfred of 1130 than the Lincoln Alfred of 1086. Period facts, a man whose large barony was situate in the north, would hardly have shown so much partiality for southern monasteries.

"Averd" by modern French writers. It is curious that, judging from the Domesday lists, the name of Alfred was not so conspicuously popular in England as might have been expected. It is however, significant that one of the charters of Henry I. and the charter of the Bishop of Salisbury give the Latinized Anglo-Saxon form of the name, Alfredus, as above, though in the charter of 1107, the Norman-Latin form Alveredus occurs. Norman writers would hardly convert a Norman name into a Saxon one, though they might do the reverse.

[1] Alveredus, v. 107.

It may also be that the witness to the Rheims charter between 1102 and 1107 was the Dorset Alfred, and therefore the Lincoln Alfred may not have lived to quite so late a period as I supposed.[1]

No doubt the Alfred of 1130 was related in some way to one of the northern families of Lincoln, but it may be assumed that he was not the eldest son of any one of them, and had no lands in Lincolnshire, and that he obtained part of his estates in Dorset and Somerset by marriage with an heiress, probably with the widow FitzGrip. On this point Mr. Thomas Bond's researches may be profitably reverted to.

It will then be asked, was he a son of the Domesday Alfred? I do not think it is imperative to suppose so. He was an Anglo-Saxon by birth, judging from the manner in which his name is spelt in the Tewkesbury charters, and he was probably named after the great Lincoln Alfred. But, seeing that Robert de la Haye, a successor of Colswain de Lincoln, made grants to the very same monasteries of Tewkesbury and Montacute, it is more reasonable to conjecture that this Alfred was a relative, perhaps a younger son, of Colswain; though it is remarkable that the Malets, the relatives of the Lincoln Alfred, likewise held knights' fees of Glastonbury Abbey; which fact, however, may only point to the intimate relationship between them and both the Lincoln families, and of the latter to each other. The description "Aluredus Senior" (temp. Hen. I.) is used in the Black Book to distinguish him from "Alfredus" [son of Robert], who was in possession of the Dorset estates in 8 Henry II. (1161-2) according to the Pipe Roll of that year, and in 12 Henry II. (1165-6) according to the Black Book.

It should be remarked that Robert de Lincoln also probably married an heiress, as he was evidently holding lands in Dorset in his father's lifetime; and this may explain how some estates which had not belonged to the widow FitzGrip came into the family, though Holne, Gillingham, and Brugia seem to have belonged to Alfred. A Robert de Lincoln occurs in the Pipe Roll of 12 Henry II., under Lincolnshire, but the Dorset Robert was dead before that date.

I venture to submit this new interpretation to the consideration of genealogists, as it seems to be at least as plausible as previous suggestions, and removes all difficulties.[2] However that may be, we are now in a position to accept any fresh evidence which may turn up, and this was far from being the case previously.

Some surprise may be expressed at the narrow period above assigned to the Lindsey Survey. Attempts have been made to reduce the limits, 1101-1120, between which it is supposed to have been compiled, but with only doubtful success, judging from Mr. J. H. Round's remarks in a previous volume of the GENEALOGIST.[3] I have shown that Colswain was succeeded by his son Picot, or Pikot, and that Picot was succeeded by his son-in-law Robert de Haia.[4] Further, I have called attention to Picot's interesting charter to Spalding, dated on Sunday, 14th May, 1111,[5] and to the fact that in the Lindsey Survey Robert de Haia is returned

[1] Vol. v. p. 156.

[2] Among other things, according to this view, Robert could have had no claim to Alan's fee. (See Vol. v. p. 156.)

[3] Vol. iv. pp. 205-213.

[4] Vol. v. p. 157.

[5] Vol. v. p. 69.

It may also be that the witness to the Rhelan charter between 1102 and 1107 was the Dame Aliferd, and therefore the Lincoln Alfred may not have lived to quite so late a period as I supposed.[1]

No doubt the Alfred of 1130 was related in some way to one of the northern families of Lincoln, but it may be assumed that he was not the eldest son of any one of them, and had no lands in Lincolnshire, and that he obtained part of his estates in Dorset and Somerset by marriage with an heiress, probably with the widow FitzGrip. On this point Mr. Thomas Duad's researches may be profitably reverted to.

Is will then be asked, was he a son of the Domesday Alfred? I do not think it is imperative to suppose so. He was an Anglo-Saxon by birth, judging from the manner in which his name is spelt in the Tewkesbury charters, and he was probably named after the great Lincoln Alfred. But, assuming that Robert de la Haye, a successor of Gelswain de Lincoln, made grants to the very same monasteries of Tewkesbury and Montacute, it is more reasonable to conjecture that this Alfred was a relative, perhaps a younger son, of Gelswain; though it is remarkable that the Malets, the relatives of the Lincoln Alfred, likewise held knight's fees of Glastonbury Abbey; which fact, however, may only point to the intimate relationship between them and both the Lincoln families, and of the latter to each other. The description "Alnodus Senior" (temp. Hen. I.) is used in the Black Book to distinguish him from "Alfrodus" [son of Robert], who was in possession of the Dorset estates in 5 Henry II. (1161-2) according to the Pipe Roll of that year, and in 12 Henry II. (1165-6) according to the Black Book.

It should be remarked that Robert de Lincoln also probably married an heiress, as he was evidently holding lands in Dorset in his father's lifetime; and this may explain how some estates which had not belonged to the widow FitzGrip came into the family, though Helne, Gillingham, and Tirgis seem to have belonged to Alfred. A Robert de Lincoln occurs in the Pipe Roll of 12 Henry II., under Lincolnshire, but the Dorset Robert was dead before that date.

I venture to submit this new interpretation to the consideration of genealogists, as it seems to be at least as plausible as previous suggestions, and removes all difficulties.[2] However that may be, we are now in a position to accept any fresh evidence which may turn up, and this was far from being the case previously.

Some surprise may be expressed at the narrow period above assigned to the Lindsey Survey. Attempts have been made to reduce the limits, 1101-1120, between which it is supposed to have been compiled, but with only doubtful success, judging from Mr. J. H. Round's remarks in a previous volume of the Genealogist.[3] I have shown that Gelswain was succeeded by his son Ricot, or Fitzot, and that Ricot was succeeded by his son-in-law Robert de Haia.[4] Further, I have called attention to Ricot's interesting charter to Spalding, dated on Sunday, 14th May, 1111,[5] and to the fact that in the Lindsey Survey Robert de Haia is returned as holding the barony of Colswain. Therefore, as Picot was living in 1111, the survey could not have been taken till after that year. The other extreme date is fixed by the fact of Ranulph Meschin being returned in the survey as in possession of the estates which he surrendered in 1120. Thus, taking no account of the odd months, we may confine the possible period of the compilation to the years between 1112 and 1119, reducing the previously wider limits by about twelve years, which must be important to the proper understanding of many matters therein recorded, but does not affect the Countess Lucy controversy.

[1] Vol. v. p. 156.

[2] Among other things, according to this view, Robert could have had no claim to Alan's fee. (See Vol. v. p. 158.)

Picot's charter is also noticeable because it mentions that he then had two grandchildren. It is consequently reasonable to assume that he was about sixty years of age in 1111, and was born about 1050, so that his father Colswain would have been born about 1020. On this ground it seems impossible that Colswain could have been son of Alfred de Lincoln (the first), as argued by Mr. Freeman, and thus another modern theory goes by the board. If there were any relationship between them, Colswain was more probably the brother than the son of Alfred; and it should be noticed that Colswain's barony is described immediately before Alfred's in Domesday. But the suggestion that Alfred was twice married, and had part of his family before the Conquest and part afterwards, is still valuable.

To sum up the Lincoln pedigree: we have been dealing with three distinct families, which may, however, have been related in the manner above indicated.

(1) Alfred de Lincoln, living in 1086, was succeeded in his barony by his son Alan de Lincoln, whose daughter Margaret married Ranulph de Bayeux. Thorold the Sheriff was also apparently a son of this Alfred, by a former marriage, for reasons already given, and was succeeded by his daughter the Countess Lucy.[1]

(2) Colswain de Lincoln, living in 1086, was succeeded by his son Picot, who was living in 1111, after which date he was succeeded by Robert de Haia, whose wife Muriel seems to have been daughter and heiress of Picot.

(3) Alfred de Lincoln, who probably married the widow Fitz Grip, was living in 1130. He was succeeded soon after by his son Robert, who was succeeded by another Alfred, living in 1165-6, and whose widow in 10 Richard I. paid a fine to marry again.

I append some further notes touching the relatives of the Lincoln family, as supplementary to what was stated in my original paper.[2]

THE COUNTESS LUCY.—Since the abstracts of the Lucy Charters were printed, three more charters referring to the Countess have been published by the Rev. Joseph Stevenson in the eleventh Report of the Historical MSS. Commission, part vii. p. 59 (on the MSS. of the Marchioness of Waterford, at Ford Castle, Northumberland). Two of [1] As to Thorold's wife, it is necessary to add these words to the note in Vol. v. p. 161:—but none in Hibaldestowe or Gameltorp, which is very important.

[2] To the list of early members of the Lincoln family given in Vol. v. p. 154, note 4, line 2, should be added Norman de Lincolia, who held a church in the borough of Derby, as stated in Domesday, p. 280. It should be further noticed that Aluredus de Lincole held one small estate and claimed another in Rutland (p. 293 b), but not as an undertenant, though he is included in Ellis's third list.

as holding the barony of Colswain. Therefore, as Picot was living in 1111, the survey could not have been taken till after that year. The other extreme date is fixed by the fact of Ranulph Meschin being returned in the survey as in possession of the estates which he surrendered in 1120. Thus, taking no account of the odd months, we may confine the possible period of the compilation to the years between 1112 and 1119, reducing the previously wider limits by about twelve years, which must be important to the proper understanding of many matters therein recorded, but does not affect the Countess Lucy controversy.

Picot's character is also noticeable because it mentions that he then had two grandchildren. It is consequently reasonable to assume that he was about sixty years of age in 1111, and was born about 1050, so that his father Colswain would have been born about 1020. On this ground it seems impossible that Colswain could have been son of Alfred de Lincoln (the first), as argued by Mr. Freeman, and thus another modern theory goes by the board. If there were any relationship between them, Colswain was more probably the brother than the son of Alfred; and it should be noticed that Colswain's barony is described immediately before Alfred's in Domesday. But the suggestion that Alfred was twice married, and had part of his family before the Conquest and part afterwards, is still valuable.

To sum up the Lincoln pedigree: we have been dealing with three distinct families, which may, however, have been related in the manner above indicated.

(1) Alfred de Lincoln, living in 1086, was succeeded in his barony by his son Alan de Lincoln, whose daughter Margaret married Ranulph de Blayeux. Thereof the Sheriff were also apparently a son of this Alfred, by a former marriage, for reasons already given, and was succeeded by his daughter the Countess Lucy;[1]

(2) Colswain de Lincoln, living in 1086, was succeeded by his son Picot, who was living in 1111, after which date he was succeeded by Robert de Haia, whose wife Muriel seems to have been daughter and heiress of Picot.

(3) Alfred de Lincoln, who probably married the widow Fitz Grip, was living in 1130. He was succeeded soon after by his son Robert, who was succeeded by another Alfred, living in 1165-6, and whose widow in 10 Richard I. paid a fine to marry again.

I append some further notes touching the relatives of the Lincoln family, as supplementary to what was stated in my original paper.[2]

The Countess Lucy.—Since the abstracts of the Lucy Charters were printed, three more charters referring to the Countess have been published by the Rev. Joseph Stevenson in the eleventh Report of the Historical MSS. Commission, part vii. p. 59 (on the MSS. of the Marchioness of Waterford, at Ford Castle, Northumberland). Two of [1] As to Thorold's wife, it is necessary to add these words to the note in Vol. v. p. 161:—but more in Hildebrand's or Gunselyn, which is very important.

[2] To the list of early members of the Lincoln family given in Vol. v. p. 134, note 4, line 2, should be added Norman de Lincoln, who held a church in the borough of Derby, as stated in Domesday, p. 280. It should be further noticed that Alfred de Lincoln held one small estate and claimed another in England (p. 292 b), but not as an undertenant, though he is included in Ellis's third list.

them are charters by Henry II. to the nuns of Stikeswald, in Lincolnshire, and refer to a gift of land in Hundinton, made by "the Countess Lucy" and Earl Ranulph (her son ?). The third is a charter by Hamo de Hundingtone, son of Toli, granting a bovate of land there which his father had bought of Lucy the Countess, and seven selions of land which Lucy the Countess held of his father in Wornabe. There is also a charter by "William the Earl de Roumare," Lucy's eldest son, relating to the same land of Hundinton.

Tanner states that the Countess Lucy founded a nunnery at Stixwould in the reign of King Stephen, and he refers to the charter of foundation, but his reference is incorrect. There, is however, an inspeximus by Henry IV. of a charter of Henry, Duke of Normandy, who confirmed the donation which "Lucy the Countess," Ranulph, Earl of Chester, and "Willelmus Comes Rosmar'," had made to the nuns of Stikeswald, "as their charters testify," the names of the witnesses showing that the charter was granted between 1143 and 1154.

A register of this abbey formerly belonged to the Coventry family, and, if still extant, should be consulted for the charter which must have been made by the Countess, and which ought to prove very instructive.

A late reference to the Countess occurs in the Valor Ecclesiasticus of Henry VIII., where she is erroneously stated to have been the founder of Spalding priory. Thorold was of course the founder, though his daughter was no doubt considered to be its chief benefactor. The entry is also remarkable because it is the only record which gives her the title of "Countess of Lincoln," but in this respect it is of no authority. As it is curious in other ways, it will be useful to quote it fully.

"In moneys distributed, to wit, yearly to thirty poor people in the vills of Multon and Awkbarow, for the soul of Lucy, Countess of Lincoln, foundress of the monastery aforesaid, to wit, to each of them 3½ ells of woollen cloth called 'duds,' price of the ell 8*d.*, with 28*s.* as of the price of seven quarters of beans, called 'pardon benys,' distributed to the poor there, of the foundation of the said Countess, 4*l.* 18*s.*"

By these doles the memory of the great Countess was kept green till the priory's dissolution.[2]

The Malet Family.—It is worth noting that the French editor (Mons. Le Prévost) of Ordericus Vitalis inclines to the belief that William Malet may have been "established in England previously to the Conquest" (ii. 151). A Robert Malet, like an Alfred de Lincoln, was a tenant of Glastonbury Abbey in the reign of Henry I. to the extent of twelve knights' fees, in which he was succeeded by another William Malet, temp. Hen. II.[1] This William was witness to a charter dated after 1154, and quoted by D'Anisy (ii. 388).

[1] In his Domesday Studies, Somerset, pp. 60, 61, Eyton expresses a doubt whether Robert Malet, the abbey's tenant, was identical with the Robert son of William who suffered forfeiture and banishment early in the reign of Henry I., as there is no evidence that the latter was restored. This agrees with the view stated in Vol. v. p. 162. But, though the latter forfeited the lands he held of the King, may not he or his son have retained lands held of the abbey? The Malets, however, like the Lincolns, are not mentioned in Domesday Book under Somerset, where Robert de Corcelle is returned as holding the estates which they subsequently obtained.

The third is a charter by Hamo de Hundingtone, son of Tail, granting a bovate of land there which his father had bought of Lucy the Countess, and seven acres of land which Lucy the Countess held of his father in Wormsby. There is also a charter by "William the Earl de Roumare," Lucy's eldest son, relating to the same land of Hundinton.

By these dolce the memory of the great Countess was kept green till the priory's dissolution.[1]

THE MALET FAMILY.—It is worth noting that the French editor (Mons. Le Prévost) of Ordericus Vitalis inclines to the belief that William Malet may have been "established in England previously to the Conquest" (ii. 191). A Robert Malet, like an Alfred de Lincoln, was a tenant of Glastonbury Abbey in the reign of Henry I. to the extent of twelve knights' fees, in which he was succeeded by another William Malet, temp. Hen. II.[1] This William was witness to a charter dated after 1154, and quoted by D'Anisy (ii. 388).

[1] In his Domesday Studies, Somerset, pp. 90, 91, Ryan expresses a doubt whether Robert Malet, the abbey's tenant, was identical with the Robert son of William who suffered forfeiture and banishment early in the reign of Henry I. as there is no evidence that the latter was restored. This agrees with the view stated in Vol. v. p. 162. But, though the latter forfeited the lands he held of the King, may not the abbey's tenants have retained lands held of the abbey? The Malets, however, like the Lincolns, are not mentioned in Domesday Book under Somerset, where Hugh de Gorselle is returned as holding the estates which they subsequently obtained.

[1] She may possibly have been "the famous heroic princess" who dwelt at Alnbourgh, where "Countess Chase" is situate. See the curious tradition in Aikenhead De la Pryme's Diary, p. 101. (Surtees Society.)

Ivo Taillebois.—"Hermentrude,"[1] referring to the allegation that Ivo was nephew of William I., states that the records of St. Martin d'Auchier, near Aumale, show that he was not the son of Adelais, the Conqueror's sister. One event in his life may be added to those which have been stated. He was appointed by William Rufus to be one of the custodians of the temporalities of the bishopric of Durham when that King deprived the Bishop for taking the part of Duke Robert.[2]

Ralph Taillebois.—The person to whom William I.'s writ was directed[3] was not the son of Beatrice, but the Ralph who is mentioned in Domesday as the late holder of lands in Herts, Bucks, Cambridge, and Bedford, some of which remained in his widow's hands, others in his daughter's. This makes it all the more certain that the Ralph mentioned in Ivo's charter to York Abbey (1088-93?) was the son of Beatrice.

Roger FitzGerold.—This baron was a witness to a charter of King William (II?) to the abbey of Tewkesbury, recited in the Charter Roll of 28 Edw. I. Mr. Eyton, in the work above quoted (p. 76), considers Roger to have been elder brother of Robert FitzGerold, and that they were both brothers of Edward de Sarisberie. The first portion at least of this conjecture has no good foundation, as Roger does not seem to be mentioned in Domesday Book. He also states that the son of Roger claimed to be heir of Robert in the reign of Henry I.

De Haia or De la Haye.—The close connexion between this family and the Lincolns is further evidenced by the two charters of Henry I. to Tewkesbury in 1100 and 1106,[4] which mention grants by Robertus de la Haia to that Abbey along with those of Alfred de Lincoln; Robert Malet being a witness in 1100. The former charter confirms a gift, by Robert de la Haia, of Ceotol and the churches of his demesne; the latter, a gift by Robert de Haia of the mill of Raz and certain fisheries. As these gifts were made before he succeeded to Picot's estates, we have here evidence that he was previously a landowner. "Ceotel," in Dorset, had belonged to Aiulf the Chamberlain in 1086, but the rest of Aiulf's lands did not belong to Robert, apparently. Robert de Haia possessed many lands in Lincolnshire which had not belonged to Colswain, among them being Middle Rasa.[5] If this were the same as Raz, he was settled in Lincolnshire long before he obtained Picot's barony. It should be noticed that the Lindsey Survey does not mention many of the lands which had been Colswain's, and some would almost appear to

There can be no doubt that the Chancellor always actually saw the original charters which the King professes to inspect, or a previous enrolment of them, as the case might be. In the present instance, Henry IV. does not profess to have seen the charters of Henry I., but two charters of inspeximus by Edward I., who quotes from the originals of his predecessor.

[5] Some of them had belonged to Odo, Bishop of Bayeux. Robert seems to have had nothing by inheritance in England.

Ivo Tailbois.—"Internuncio," referring to the allegation that Ivo was nephew of William I., states that the records of St. Martin d'Auchier, near Aumale, show that he was not the son of Adelais, the Conqueror's sister. One event in his life may be added to those which have been stated. He was appointed by William Rufus to be one of the custodians of the temporalities of the bishopric of Durham when that King deprived the Bishop for taking the part of Duke Robert.[1]

Hatim Tailbois.—The person to whom William I.'s writ was directed[2] was not the son of Beatrice, but the Ralph who is mentioned in Domesday as the late holder of lands in Herts, Bucks, Cambridge, and Bedford, some of which remained in his widow's hands, others in his daughter's. This makes it all the more certain that the Ralph mentioned in Ivo's charter to York Abbey (1088-93?) was the son of Beatrice.

Roger Fitzgeneros.—This baron was a witness to a charter of King William (III) to the abbey of Tewkesbury, recited in the Charter Roll of 28 Edw. I. Mr. Eyton, in the work above quoted (p. 76), considers Roger to have been elder brother of Robert Fitzgerold, and that they were both brothers of Edward de Salisbury. The first portion at least of this conjecture has no good foundation, as Roger does not seem to be mentioned in Domesday book. He also states that the son of Roger claimed to be heir of Robert in the reign of Henry I.

The former charter confirms a gift, by Robert de la Haia, of Cestel and the churches of his demesne; the latter, a gift by Robert de Haia of the mill of Xor and certain fisheries. As these gifts were made before he succeeded to Ficot's estates, we have here evidence that he was previously a landowner. "Cestel," in Dorset, had belonged to Aiulf the Chamberlain in 1086, but the rest of Aiulf's lands did not belong to Robert, apparently. Robert de Haia possessed many lands in Lincolnshire which had not belonged to Colswein, among them being Middle Tax.[5] If this were the same as Hac, he was settled in Lincolnshire long before he obtained Ficot's barony. It should be noticed that the Lindsey Survey does not mention many of the lands which had been Colswein's, and some would almost appear to have gone to other persons; hence it might have been suspected that Robert succeeded to only part of them, and that Picot left co-heiresses, or that part of the barony had been seized by the Crown; but most of the missing estates are afterwards found in the possession of Gerard de Camville, successor in title to Robert de Haia, so that there can be little doubt but that he acquired the whole honor. Richard de la Haye was witness to a charter of Henry, Duke of Normandy, abstracted by D'Anisy (i. 362), who also refers to several others of this name. It may be suspected that the surname was a Norman one. The family, in fact, had lands in Normandy as well as in England, and gave some of both to the abbey of Essey. In the Black Book Aluredus de Lincolnia (junior), in 12 Henry II., returns Sanson de Lincolnia and Willelmus de Haia among his knights.

Ranulph Meschin and the County of Carlisle.—I have shown that Ranulph Meschin is not called Earl in the Lindsey Survey, as commonly supposed, although at that time he must have been in possession of whatever honour he held in the north.[1] Consequently it is certain that he was never Earl of Carlisle, as he is called by many writers. This fact was unknown to Mr. Hodgson Hinde, who, though he rejects the dates assigned by chroniclers to the supposed creation, does not cease to write of the earldom of Carlisle.

In the appendix to his "Reign of William Rufus," Mr. Freeman has a long article headed "The Earldom of Carlisle," in which there is a summary of the literature on the subject; and recently Professor Creighton, in his "Carlisle," has referred to the creation by Henry I. of an Earl of Carlisle. For this the latter has been taken to task by Mr. J. H. Round,[2] who, however, leaves it to be inferred that nothing of the kind was created, being influenced probably by Lappenberg, who, in correcting Palgrave, falls into that error.[3]

What was actually created by William II. or Henry I. can be ascertained by perusing the charters recorded in the register, or registers, of Wetherall Priory, extracts from which are given by Dugdale.[4] Mr. Hinde, it is true, rejects "the pretended confirmation charter of William I. to that monastery" as a "palpable forgery,"[5] but that charter professes to have been granted by William II., which makes all the difference, though the title of "Earl of Cumberland" contained in it is suspicious, as the district was not then called by that name, and one would desire to see the original entry. On the other hand, Mr. Hinde refers with approval to "the real foundation charter" of Ranulph Meschin.[6] It should be remarked that the donor calls himself by his simple name, without any title whatever. But the important point in this charter is its address, which runs as follows:—"To Richerius, Sheriff of Carlisle, and to all his (Ranulph's) men, French and English, who dwell within the power of Carlisle."

[1] Vol. v. 166, 167. [2] Athenæum, 26 Oct., 1889.

[3] Lappenberg's suggestion that Matthew of Westminster's date of 1072 is a mistake for 1122 will not hold water. It is noticeable that Matthew does not really state that an earldom was created at all, or that such creation took place in 1072. He says, "Hijs temporibus regebat comitatum Carleoli Comes Ranulphus de Micenis," &c. It may rather be conjectured that he had some authentic but undated information on the subject, and did not know where to insert it.

Richard de la Haye was witness to a charter of Henry, Duke of Normandy, abstracted by D'Anisy (i. 382), who also refers to several others of this name. It may be suspected that the surname was a Norman one. The family, in fact, had lands in Normandy as well as in England, and gave some of both to the abbey of Essey. [5] The Roll, Counts, p. xviii.

[6] Ibid., and Archæol. Journal, xvi. 222. See also Hodgson's Northumb., 187.

The regal style here adopted may be considered as proving that Ranulph Meschin had comitival and palatine jurisdiction over a district which he himself calls a power (potestas),[1] though it was evidently a shire or county; and he must have had the appointment of the Sheriff, whom he addresses as his own officer. His rank was thus not inferior to that of a Comes. Few Earls, indeed, had so much authority.

Matthew of Westminster is, therefore, strictly correct in saying, "regebat comitatum Carleoli," though the context has led all writers to construe this as "earldom" rather than as "county," both of which meanings belong to the word comitatus. Yet he would hardly talk of "ruling" an earldom. Nor is the Chronicon Cumbriæ far out in using the description "totam terram de comitatu Cumbriæ." Meschin may not have had all the land, but he had jurisdiction over the whole.

Another definition of Meschin's barony is given in the Wetherall register, which quotes a charter of King Henry I., about 1131-2, confirming to St. Mary's Abbey, York, a gift made "in the time when Ranulph Earl of Chester had the honor of Carlisle." But Edward III.'s inspeximus of a similar charter merely says, "as they (the monks) had when Randulph Earl of Chester had Carlisle."[2] At any rate, Henry I. never called Carlisle an earldom.

We are not, therefore, authorised to call "the power of Carlisle" an earldom, though it was very like one. It would be more correct to call it a palatinate or a marquisate, though "marquis" was considered to be an estraunge noun in England, even so late as the year 1400.[3] But, as a matter of fact, Meschin had honour and power without title. At a later date, in Testa de Nevill, he is called merely "Lord of Cumberland."

Ranulph Meschin and Calder Abbey.—Relying on the Monasticon (v. 339), I suggested that Ranulph Gernons possessed lands in Cumberland, and gave some of them to Calder Abbey.[4] There was some doubt about the matter, as the charter professes to be made by Ranulph Meschin, though the abbey is alleged not to have been founded till 1134, five years after the death of Ranulph Meschin, Earl of Chester, and the editors of the Monasticon professed to settle this difficulty by supposing the gift to have been made by the Earl's son Ranulph Gernons. But it has at length been more satisfactorily dealt with by the Rev. A. G. Loftie in his recent History of the Abbey (pp. 44, 45), where it is suggested that the lands in question were really given by "Ranulphus Meschinus filius Willelmi filii Ranulphi," who is mentioned in charters to St. Bees' Priory. I presume this Ranulph to have been the same person as Ranulph de Bayeux, who was nephew of Ranulph Meschin, Earl of Chester, and married Margaret, daughter of Alan de Lincoln.[5] Consequently there is no reason to [1] This word calls to mind the governors of Venetian territories, who were called podestà.

[2] Charter Roll, 5 Edw. III. No. 66. This inspects two charters similar to those noticed in my abstracts, Nos. 11 and 17. There is no confirmation of the supposed charter of William II., but it is remarkable that in Patent Roll, 40 Edw. III. p. 2, m. 34d., the King states that the priory of Wetheral "is of the foundation of our progenitors, formerly Kings of England."

[3] Nicolas, however, quoting Cruise, "derives the appellation from the word Marchio, which had been used for many ages to describe both Earls and Barons, but especially those who were Lords Marchers, or Governors of frontier provinces."

[4] Vol. v. p. 168.

[5] Vol. v. pp. 156, 157, 166.

The regal style here adopted may be considered as proving that Ranulph Meschin had exercised and palatine jurisdiction over a district which he himself calls a power (potestas),[1] though it was evidently a shire or county; and he must have had the appointment of the Sheriff, whom he addresses as his own officer. His rank was thus not inferior to that of a Comes. Few Earls, indeed, had so much authority.

Matthew of Westminster is, therefore, strictly correct in saying, "regalis comitatum Cestrensis." Though the context has led all writers to consider this as "earldom" rather than as "county," both of which meanings belong to the word comitatus. Yet he would hardly talk of "ruling" an earldom. Nor is the Chronicon Cambriæ far out in using the description "totam terram de comitatu Cumbriæ."[2] Meschin may not have had all the land, but he had jurisdiction over the whole.

Another definition of Meschin's barony is given in the Westhall register, which quotes a charter of King Henry I., about 1131-3, confirming to St. Mary's Abbey, York, a gift made "in the time when Ranulph Earl of Chester had the honor of Carlisle." But Edward III.'s inspeximus of a similar charter merely says, "as they (the monks) had when Ranulph Earl of Chester had Carlisle."[3] At any rate, Henry I. never called Carlisle an earldom.

We are not, therefore, authorised to call "the power of Carlisle" an earldom, though it was very like one. It would be more correct to call it a palatinate or a marquisate, though "marquis" was considered to be an exotic name in England, even so late as the year 1100.[4] Nay, as a matter of fact, Meschin had honour and power without title. At a later date, in Testa de Nevill, he is called merely "Lord of Cumberland."

Ranulph Meschin and Queen Adeliza.—Referring on the Annalists (v. 339), I suggested that Ranulph Germons possessed lands in Cumberland, and gave some of them to Calder Abbey.[5] There was some doubt about the matter, as the charter professes to be made by Ranulph Meschin, though the abbey is alleged not to have been founded till 1134, five years after the death of Ranulph Meschin, Earl of Chester, and the editors of the Monasticon professed to settle this difficulty by supposing the gift to have been made by the Earl's son Ranulph Germons. But it has at length been more satisfactorily dealt with by the Rev. A. G. Loftie in his recent History of the Abbey (pp. 14, 15), where it is suggested that the lands in question were really given by "Ranulphus Meschinus filius Willelmi filii Ranulphi," who is mentioned in charters to St. Bees' Priory. I presume this Ranulph to have been the same person as Ranulph de Bayeux, who was nephew of Ranulph Meschin, Earl of Chester, and married Margaret, daughter of Alan de Lincoln.[6] Consequently there is no reason to

[2] Charter Roll, 5 Edw. III. No. 66. This inspexus two charters similar to those noticed in my abstracts, Nos. 11 and 12. There is no confirmation of the supposed charter of William II., but it is reasonable that in Patent Roll, 10 Edw. III. p. 2, m. 34d, the King states that the priory of Westhall "is of the foundation of our predecessors, formerly Kings of England."

[3] Nicolas, however, quoting Cowie, "derives the appellation from the word Marches, which had been used for many ages to describe both Earls and Barons, but-especially those who were Lords Marchers, or Governors of frontier provinces."

suppose that Earl Ranulph the first retained any of his Cumberland property after 1120.

Ranulph Meschin and Beltisford.—It will be remembered that Meschin surrendered this great lordship, in 1120, with the rest of his wife's inheritance; but it is probable that he repurchased this and other estates on his own account.[1] Certainly, he and his wife, after the year 1123, join in making a charter to Spalding priory, which grants the churches of Beltisford, Scamelisbi, and Mintinges. They would scarcely have done this if those places were then in the Crown, though King Henry I. himself confirmed the gift. There is, a faint possibility that their charter was a confirmation, as the monks had long previously been in possession at least of the tithes of Beltisford and Scamelisby; and it was customary in those days to draw up confirmations in the same terms as original grants, from which they are undistinguishable. If Meschin purchased Beltisford, this may have given rise to some complications when the question of dower arose, and it explains why Ranulph Gernons paid to the King the large sum of 500 marks for making an agreement between his mother and himself concerning her dower. She would of course be entitled to a third of her husband's estates, but over and above that she would naturally claim some compensation for the loss of her inheritance. We know that Beltisford belonged to Gernons.

Castles and Earldoms.—The following extract from Blomefield's Norfolk (ix. 60) will help to explain how it was that Countess Lucy came to build one of the towers of Lincoln Castle.

"Sir Richard de Wodehouse, son of Sir William, lived in the reign of Edward III. and was Lord of Rydon, and by virtue of this lordship, etc., held of the Castle of Rising, was obliged to maintain a tower of that Castle called Wodehouse's Tower, and paid a sum of money yearly for castle-guard."

In like manner the Countess would hold her barony or some at least of her manors under the obligation of maintaining one or more of the towers of Lincoln Castle; and her father Thorold doubtless held by the same tenure. As Colswain's descendants had the wardenship, he and they may have had to maintain the other towers.

It has been shown negatively that Earls did not usually adopt the names of counties as titles immediately after the Conquest.[2] On consideration, I think we are justified in proceeding beyond a mere negation, and in alleging positively that they took their titles, when they used any at all, from the castles where they resided. Instances have been given, but I was prevented from arriving at a definite conclusion by the fact that Hugh Lupus, in a charter previously referred to,[3] calls himself Earl of Chester. But that is not really an exception to the rule. He did not take his title from the County but from the Castle of Chester. Had he resided at any other place in the county, he would doubtless have been known by the name of that place. Hence, moreover, his adoption of the title of "Earl of Chester" does not prove per se that he was not also Earl of Lincoln, as he seems to have been, although he never used that title.[4]

It is hoped that all the difficulties which have so long prevented a suppose that Earl Ranulph the first retained any of his Cumberland property after 1120.

RANULPH MESCHINS AND BERTREVOUN.—It will be remembered that Meschin surrendered this great lordship, in 1120, with the rest of his wife's inheritance; but it is probable that he repurchased this and other estates on his own account. Certainly, he and his wife, after the year 1128, join in making a charter to Spalding priory, which grants the churches of Bellisford, Sommelsfeld, and Alfintiques. They would scarcely have done this if those places were then in the Crown, though King Henry I. himself confirmed the gift. There is, a faint possibility that their charter was a confirmation, as the monks had long previously been in possession at least of the tithes of Bellisford and Sommelsby; and it was customary in those days to draw up confirmations in the same terms as original grants, from which they are undistinguishable. We know that Bellisford belonged to Germons.

CASTLES AND BARONIES.—The following extract from Blomefield's Norfolk (ix. 60) will help to explain how it was that Countess Lucy came to build one of the towers of Lincoln Castle.

"Sir Richard de Wodehouse, son of Sir William, lived in the reign of Edward III. and was Lord of Heydon, and by virtue of this leadership, etc., held of the Castle of Rising, was obliged to maintain a tower of that Castle called Wodehouse's Tower, and paid a sum of money yearly for ward-penny."

In like manner the Countess would hold her barony or some at least of her manors under the obligation of maintaining one or more of the towers of Lincoln Castle; and her father Thorold doubtless held by the same tenure. As Colswein's descendants had the wardership, he and they may have had to maintain the other towers.

clear understanding of the history of these important families have at last been removed. The labour has been immense, as may be gathered from the fact that a learned antiquary, only a few years ago, printed this remark:—"I have long since despaired of seeing a satisfactory solution." Another wrote: "one can do little more than sum up the arguments as they stand." Yet another declared that whoever should "smooth away" the confusions "will deserve everybody's gratitude." If I have succeeded in doing this, I am satisfied.

Weddings at St. Saviour's, Southwark, from A.D. 1606 to 1625.

Communicated by JOHN V. L. PRUYN, Barrister-at-Law of the United States.

Genealogists at large, and, more particularly, American ones, are indebted to the kindness of the Rector of St. Saviour's, Southwark, for most generously enabling me to supplement my recently printed list of marriages which took place between 1606 and 1625, at St. Mary le Strand, by those solemnised at the former Church during the same period. This is but another instance of the liberal spirit in which many of the London clergy are encouraging the earnest efforts now being made to place the contents of Parish Registers beyond the reach of destruction. These efforts to print as rapidly as practicable the information afforded by early records of this nature, though, as I have said, very earnest in their character, are as yet very limited in extent. Certainly the most energetic, and one that is just now attracting a great deal of notice in antiquarian circles, is the scheme, actively progressing, initiated by an enthusiastic amateur genealogist of Dutch lineage, the Rev. A. W. C. Hallen, who has already grappled with two very voluminous London Registers (St. Mary, Woolnoth, and St. Mary, Woolchurch Haw, 1538-1760) and printed them entire, with full indexes. Mr. Hallen is now engaged in doing the like for St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, and his labours well deserve the pecuniary support of all genealogists whose means permit them to render assistance in speeding such good work. The amount of self-imposed labour which has been accomplished in an incredibly short space of time by this indefatigable gentleman is truly surprising. The Athenæum (June Editorings at St. Saviour's, Southwark, from A.D. 1606 to 1624.

Communicated by JOHN V. L. PRUYN, Barrister-at-Law of the United States.

Genealogists at large, and, more particularly, American ones, are indebted to the kindness of the Rector of St. Saviour's, Southwark, for most generously enabling me to supplement my recently printed list of marriages which took place between 1606 and 1625, at St. Mary le Strand, by those solemnized at the former Church during the same period. This is but another instance of the liberal spirit in which many of the London clergy are encouraging the earnest efforts now being made to place the contents of Parish Registers beyond the reach of destruction. These efforts to print as rapidly as practicable the information afforded by early records of this nature, though, as I have said, very earnest in their character, are as yet very limited in extent. Certainly the most energetic, and one that is just now attracting a great deal of notice in antiquarian circles, is the scheme, actively progressing, initiated by an enthusiastic amateur genealogist of Dutch lineage, the Rev. A. W. C. Hallen, who has already grappled with two very voluminous London Registers (St. Mary, Woolnoth, and St. Mary, Woolchurch Haw, 1538-1760) and printed them entire, with full indexes. Mr. Hallen is now engaged in doing the like for St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, and his labours well deserve the pecuniary support of all genealogists whose means permit them to render assistance in speeding such good work. The amount of self-imposed labour which has been accomplished in an incredibly short space of time by this indefatigable gentleman is truly surprising. The Athenæum (June 26, 1886, p. 837), in an article which speaks in high terms of his already completed work, says that "a really marked advance will be made (in the printing of Parish Registers) if Mr. Hallen's enterprising proposal meets with the support it deserves. He announces himself prepared to issue every year the transcript of a London parish register. The toil involved in such an undertaking may be estimated from the volume before us (the registers of St. Mary Woolnoth, and St. Mary Woolchurch Haw, referred to above); and the admirable manner in which, it will be seen, Mr. Hallen has here performed his task leads us to express our sincere hope that genealogists and antiquaries may promptly respond to so exceptional and spirited an offer."

It may here be pointed out that incumbents of Parish Churches in England, generally speaking, make no allowance for the benefits likely to accrue to them in the matter of fees if the entries in their respective Registers are printed and widely circulated. With reference to America alone (as experience has often taught) no person interested in a printed Parish Register entry is fully satisfied until he has obtained a certified copy of the original entry from the legal custodian of the volume which contains it. And it must be apparent to everyone that while the whereabouts of certain required items of information remain unknown there is not the remotest possibility of fees being forthcoming for official copies of them.

Notes on the Foreign Coats in Planche's Roll of Arms.

Communicated by G. W. Watson.

The objects of the following paper, which deals only with the foreign arms in Planche's Roll,[1] are: firstly, to correct the names, in which the ignorance or the carelessness of transcribers has often produced extraordinary dislocations: secondly, to correct any chance errors in the blazon: thirdly, to give a few particulars of each person mentioned. For this latter purpose I have taken the date of compilation to be 1270—80. That the majority of the persons belonged to this period may be easily perceived; on the other hand several were dead long before (for example Nos. 37 and 77). But this, of course, will be found to be the case with many of these Rolls (see Mr. S. Percival's Preface to two Rolls of Arms, 1864, p. 21).

Except in a few cases, I have not thought it worth while to amend the arms of the different kings, but it may be remarked that the mistakes and misapprehensions in this portion have a sort of resemblance to those in Walford's Roll (Archæologia, xxxix) and in Stacey Grimaldi's Coll. Top. et Gen. ii. 320). In all three, for instance, the arms of Portugal are described as being dice.

About 20 of the names I have failed to identify. When such solutions have to be obtained as Umonner=Vivonne, and Sceys=Archiac, this is perhaps not altogether surprising. The most frequent

NOTE ON THE WREN PEDIGREE.

Communicated by W. T. LAW.

In the Genealogist (Vol. i. New Series, p. 262) is an excellent and, I believe, accurate pedigree of the Wren family compiled by Mr. H. Stinton Smith which I should like to supplement by adding a few particulars relating to the marriage and issue of Matthew Wren, Bishop of Ely 1638-67. In regard to the Bishop's marriage, different statements have been current. Mr. Stinton Smith says that the name of the Bishop's wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Cutler of Ipswich, evidently quoting from the Visitation of Cambridgeshire taken in 1684; while Dr. Benjamin Buckler in his "Stemmata Chicheleana" states that the lady was Elizabeth daughter of Thomas Beaumont whose descent from the family of Chichele he duly sets forth. On the strength of Dr. Buckler's researches (I suppose) one, at least, of Bishop Wren's descendants claimed Founder's kin at All Souls College, and had his claim allowed. Lastly in Miss L. Phillimore's interesting account of Sir Christopher Wren (nephew of the Bishop) and his relatives, Matthew Wren's spouse is designated Cull. This is not a misprint for Cutler, for in response to my enquiry, Miss Phillimore very kindly cited her authority, which as far I can recollect was a Chancery Proceeding or Trust, in which Bishop Wren was concerned. Now who was this mysterious wife of Matthew Wren?

In trying to settle this question it is natural to consult the pages of "Parentalia or Memoirs of the Family of the Wrens, by Christopher, son of Sir Christopher Wren, with the care of Joseph Ames, F.R.S., &c., London, 1750." This volume, which contains nearly all that is known about Bishop Wren, singularly enough, is absolutely silent as to his wife's parentage. Fortunately, however, in the pages of Parentalia is preserved a copy of Wren's Diary, "transcribed from his own handwriting in the blank pages of Pond's Almanack for the year

NOTE ON THE WREN PEDIGREE.

Communicated by W. T. LAW.

In the Genealogist (Vol. i. New Series, p. 252) is an excellent and, I believe, accurate pedigree of the Wren family compiled by Mr. H. Sinnton Smith which I should like to supplement by adding a few particulars relating to the marriage and issue of Matthew Wren, Bishop of Ely 1638-67. In regard to the Bishop's marriage, different statements have been current. Mr. Sinnton Smith says that the name of the Bishop's wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Butler of Ipswich, evidently quoting from the Visitation of Cambridge entry taken in 1684; while Dr. Benjamin Buckler in his "Steinmata Chichelèana" states that the lady was Elizabeth daughter of Thomas Beaumont whose descent from the family of Chichele he duly sets forth. On the strength of Dr. Buckler's researches (I suppose) one, at least, of Bishop Wren's descendants claimed Founder's kin at All Souls College, and had his claim allowed. Lastly in Miss L. Phillimore's interesting account of Sir Christopher Wren (nephew of the Bishop) and his relatives, Matthew Wren's spouse is designated Cull. This is not a misprint for Cutler, for in response to my enquiry, Miss Phillimore very kindly cited her authority, which as far I can recollect was a Chancery Proceeding or Trust, in which Bishop Wren was concerned.

Now who was this mysterious wife of Matthew Wren?

In trying to settle this question it is natural to consult the pages of "Parentalia or Memoirs of the Family of the Wrens, by Christopher, son of Sir Christopher Wren, with the care of Joseph Ames, F.R.S., &c., London, 1750." This volume, which contains nearly all that is known about Bishop Wren, singularly enough, is absolutely silent as to his wife's parentage. Fortunately, however, in the pages of Parentalia is preserved a copy of Wren's Diary, transcribed from his own handwriting in the blank pages of Foul's Almanack for the year

1652." Even here, however, no direct information on this point is forthcoming, but the following extracts afford such entire corroboration of other evidences of Mrs. Wren's identity that they are worth quoting.

"Aug. 17th Felici Matrimonio jungebar 1628.
Oct. 17 Eliz. Conjux nata Ringsaliæ (Ringshall) 1624 " (an obvious misprint —the year is 1604).
Dec. 8th Ad Christum evolavit pia anima conjugis E. media post 5am Matutinam 1646.
May 7, Nuptiæ Eliz. filiolæ, 1650."

Turning next to the Bishop's will (a very lengthy one), dated 22nd Sept., 1665, and proved in the P.C.C. 23rd June, 1667 (Carr, fol. 80), at first sight but little fresh light is thrown upon the point at issue; the name of Cutler is never once mentioned, but the following expressions may be quoted, the bearing of which will eventually appear. "My children reserved to me who have formerly buried six of them that my dear wife Elizabeth brought me." "These eight which still remain, the youngest being now in the 26th year of his age." There is likewise mention of a "Mr. Chichly," of whom the Bishop had some land. It will be seen from these quotations that, so far as it goes, and taken by itself, the will appears rather to support the Beaumont than the Cutler theory, especially as the testator nominates Dr. Joseph Beaumont (master of Peterhouse) one of the supervisors of his will. The next evidence I shall adduce is that of the parish register of Sproughton, near Ipswich, where the Cutlers resided for many generations, and in it are the following entries:

Marriages.—1621. Robert Browenrigg & Elizabeth Cutler on 27th Feb.
1628. Mathewe Wren & Elizabeth Browenrigg on 17th Aug.

This latter entry appears bald when it is considered that the bridegroom was Dean of Windsor and Wolverhampton at that time, but no doubt as to his identity can arise, since the entry in the Bishop's diary quoted above, proves that his marriage took place on the very date recorded in the Sproughton register. Mrs. Wren was thus a widow when she married the Dean. Robert and Elizabeth Brownrigg had two daughters, viz: Elizabeth, baptised at Sproughton, 13th, Jan., 1623, and Ann, baptised 19th April, 1625. So meagre are these entries that they do not of themselves prove that Matthew Wren's wife was Robert Brownrigg's widow, and not a spinster of that name; this fact, however, can be established by once more collating the Bishop's invaluable diary with another parish register. An extract from the former states that his wife was born at Ringshall, 17th Oct., 1604 (which reads, by an obvious misprint, 1624). I therefore examined the register of this parish and found on that same date that "Elizabeth Cutler, daughter of Mr. Thomas Cutler, was baptised." This may be taksn as decisively settling the question of Mrs. Wren's parentage and double marriage. By her first husband she had the two daughters I have previously mentioned. Of Ann, the younger, I know nothing beyond her baptism; the elder, Elizabeth, married Dr. Joseph Beaumont, Master of Peterhouse, on the 7th of May 1650. The diary as usual gives the date, and she is termed "filiola," an expression evidently used for step-daughter, for to none of the Bishop's own children does he apply any other designation than "F." Mrs. Beaumont is said to have died 31st May 1662, and to have been 1852." Even here, however, no direct information on this point is forthcoming, but the following extracts afford such entire corroboration of other evidences of Mrs. Wren's identity that they are worth quoting.

"Aug. 17th, Folio Matrimonio Jungeber 1822.

Oct. 17 Ehe. Conter mit Elisabetha (Elisabeth) 1824" (an obvious misprint—the year is 1824).

Dec. 8th Ad Christum evolavit pia anima conjugis E., media post 6am Matutinam 1848.

May 7, Nupsit Filia filiola, 1850."

Turning next to the Bishop's will (a very lengthy one), dated 22nd Sept., 1866, and proved in the P.C.C. 22nd Jan., 1867 (Cox, fol. 89), at first sight but little fresh light is thrown upon the point at issue; the name of Outler is never once mentioned, but the following expressions may be quoted, the bearing of which will eventually appear. "My children reserved to me who have formerly buried six of them that my dear wife Elizabeth brought me." "Three eight which still remain, the youngest being now in the 26th year of his age." There is likewise mention of a "Mr. Chilcilly," of whom the Bishop had some land. It will be seen from these quotations that, so far as it goes, and taken by itself, the will appears rather to support the Beaumont than the Outler theory, especially as the testator nominates Dr. Joseph Beaumont (master of Peterhouse) one of the supervisors of his will. The next evidence I shall adduce is that of the parish register of Sprongdon, near Ipswich, where the Outlers resided for many generations, and in it are the following entries:

Marriages.—1821. Robert Browning & Elizabeth Outler on 27th Feb.

1823. Matthew Wren & Elizabeth Browning on 17th Aug.

This latter entry appears bald when it is considered that the bridegroom was Dean of Windsor and Wolverhampton at that time, but no doubt as to his identity can arise, since the entry in the Bishop's diary quoted above, proves that his marriage took place on the very date recorded in the Sprongdon register. Mrs. Wren was thus a widow when she married the Dean. Robert and Elizabeth Browning had two daughters, viz: Elizabeth, baptised at Sprongdon, 13th Jan., 1823, and Ann, baptised 19th April, 1825. So much are these entries that they do not of themselves prove that Matthew Wren's wife was Robert Browning's widow, and not a spinster of that name; this fact, however, can be established by once more collating the Bishop's invaluable diary with another parish register. An extract from the former states that his wife was born at Kingshall, 17th Oct., 1804 (which reads, by an obvious misprint, 1824). I therefore examined the register of this parish and found on that same date that "Elizabeth Outler, daughter of Mr. Thomas Outler, was baptised." This may be taken as decisively settling the question of Mrs. Wren's parentage and double marriage. By her first husband she had the two daughters I have previously mentioned. Of Ann, the youngest, I know nothing beyond her baptism; the elder, Elizabeth, married Dr. Joseph Beaumont, Master of Peterhouse, on the 7th of May 1850. The diary as usual gives the date, and she is termed "filiola," an expression evidently used for step-daughter, for to none of the Bishop's own children does he apply any other designation than "F." Mrs. Beaumont is said to have died 21st May 1852, and to have been buried in Ely Cathedral. She left, besides three sons, John, William, and Charles Beaumont, living in 1665, a daughter Anne Susannah Beaumont, to whom the Bishop bequeaths £100 if she marry with the consent of her father "as a memorial of her grandmother (i.e. Mrs. Wren, deceased.) It is noticeable that the Bishop carefully avoids calling her his grand-daughter, for though the young lady stood in that relationship to his wife, none of his own blood flowed in her veins. From the terms of the will therefore we should be led to conclude, even if no other evidence were forthcoming, that Wren married a widow who had a child by a former husband.

It is thus obvious that the four unimpeachable sources of information namely the two parish registers, the Bishop's will and the diary are in absolute accord in testifying to the Cutler-Brownrigg personality of the wife of Matthew Wren. It may perhaps be asked whether the Bishop married more than once, to this I can only reply that I am not aware that it has ever been even suggested; that no single fact in favour of such a surmise can I believe be adduced, and that all the evidence I am acquainted with is opposed to it. When Wren married Mrs. Brownrigg in 1628 he was aged forty-three and so it is not actually impossible that he was then a widower, but his diary, so full of dates and events ranging from the birth of his father Francis Wren in 1552 to the death of his wife in in 1646, gives no hint of more than one wife and we may look in vain for the record of the births of any issue except those mentioned between 1628 and 1646. As however there is absolutely no foundation for such a supposition, it is hardly necessary to labour the point, especially as it is almost impossible to prove a negative in such a case. That Wren took another wife after 1646 is even more improbable. He was a prisoner in the Tower from 1642 to 1660, when he was released at the age of 75, and died in 1667. Had he married again therefore it must have been between 1660 and 1667. Reference to the Diary gives no help here, as the latest entry is of his wife's death in 1646, but the terms of his will are utterly opposed to any such supposition, for we only hear of his "dear wife Elizabeth" and of the children she brought him, while his mention of the fact that his youngest child was at that time aged 26 (William, born 1638) seems to show that, at any rate, he had no issue surviving in 1665 by a second wife, and I think we may with every confidence entirely set aside so gratuitous a surmise, and one so thoroughly unsupported by any known fact, that I have only considered it for the sake of completeness in dealing with the Bishop's matrimonial relations.

Some particulars of Bishop Wren's family are given in Mr. H. Stinton Smith's pedigree before mentioned, and more fully in Miss Lucy Phillimore's excellent "Life of Sir Christopher Wren;" while an unusually good account of this prelate's sons occurs in the Visitation of Cambridgeshire, taken in 1684 by Sir Henry St. George, Clarenceux, before alluded to, and which is to be found in the Genealogist, Vol. iii., O.S. p. 314. The few additional particulars following, may, however, be of interest.

1. Matthew Wren (eldest son) some time Secretary to H.R.H. the Duke of York, was born in Peterhouse, Cambridge, on 20th Aug., 1629. Will dated on board the "Royal Prince, 19th May, 1672;

buried in Ely Cathedral. She left, besides three sons, John, William, and Charles Beaumont, living in 1665, a daughter Anne Susannah Beaumont, to whom the Bishop bequeaths £100 if she marry with the consent of her father "as a memorial of her grandmother (i.e. Mrs. Wren, deceased)." It is noticeable that the Bishop carefully avoids calling her his grand-daughter, for though the young lady stood in that relationship to his wife, none of his own blood flowed in her veins. Stinton Smith's pedigree before mentioned, and more fully in Miss Lucy Phillimore's excellent "Life of Sir Christopher Wren;" while an unusually good account of this prelate's sons occurs in the Visitation of Cambridgeshire, taken in 1684 by Sir Henry St. George, Clarencieux, before alluded to, and which is to be found in the Genealogist, Vol. iii., O.S. p. 314. The few additional particulars following, may, however, be of interest.

1. Matthew Wren (eldest son) some time Secretary to Edd. II. the Duke of York, was born in Peterhouse, Cambridge, on 20th Aug., 1629. Will dated on board the "Royal Prince, 19th May, 1672; proved in the P.C.C., 29th Jan., 1673, by his brothers Charles, Thomas and William. He died a bachelor.

2. Thomas Wren, L.L.D., of Wilberton, Isle ef Ely (second son), was born—with a twin brother, Francis, who died young) in Peterhouse, 11th Jan., 1632, was Archdeacon and Prebendary of Ely. By his will, dated 25th July, 1670 and proved in the P.C.C., 10th Dec., 1679; he bequeathed all his property to his brother William, his executor.

3. Charles Wren of Feltwell, co. Norfolk (third son), married before 22nd Sept., 1665. Will dated 11 May, 1681; proved in the P.C.C. by Dorothea, his relict, 21st July, 1681. Bequeathed a legacy to his daughter Ann on her marriage or attainment of 21 years.

4. Sir William Wren, K^t of Wilberton (Isle of Ely) and the Middle Temple, and probably Constable of Wisbech Castle; born at Ely House, Holborn, 19 March, 1638. Died a bachelor. Admon. granted 31st March, 1690, to John Wilson, Esq. principal creditor; his sisters Ann Ball and Maria Wren having renounced their claim.

Of the Bishop's daughters four survived him. The eldest, Ann, was born at Ipswich, 4 Sept. 1630; she married (before 22nd Sept. 1665) John Ball Esq., and was living on, or shortly before, 31st of March, 1690. Susan, second daughter, was born at St. Giles's-in-the-Fields, London, 25 Jan. 1633—I find that the parish registers are wanting in baptisms for many years at this period—she married before 22nd Sept. 1665, Robert Wright of Wangford, co. Suffolk, Serjeant-at-Law, afterwards Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, by whom she had several children. As her husband survived her, she must have died before 1689, and so her name is not found joined with those of her sisters when they renounced administration of their brother, Sir William Wren's estate, in 1690. Mary, third daughter, born in St. Giles's-in-the-Fields, 17th Jan., 1634, and was living unmarried on, or shortly before 31st March, 1690. Frances, youngest daughter, was born at Tostock, co. Suffolk, 24th Sept., 1636; of her I know nothing more than that she was living unmarried 22nd Sept., 1665, and think it most probable that she died before 31st March, 1690 as she appears to have had nothing to do with her brother William's affairs. The above notes represent nearly all I have as yet ascertained respecting Bishop Wren's marriage and issue. Should any reader of the GENEALOGIST be in a position to give me any further particulars I should be greatly indebted if he or she would communicate with me. I should like to know, among other things, the burial place of Mrs. Wren—the dates and places of marriage and burial of the Bishop's children—and any account of his descendants now living.

Communicated by The REV. FREDERIC T. COLBY, D.D.

The original of the following deed is in the possession of the Rev. T. W. Whale Rector of Dolton, North Devon. The size of the document is 6½ in. by 6½. A seal, bearing the coat of arms of Fruze is attached to it by a strong silken cord, but one corner is broken off. The deed is written in Roman characters, and each line begins with a capital letter.

GRANT OF ARMS TO WILLIAM FISHER, OF THE CITY OF LONDON, MERCHANT, 1660.

(From the original in the British Museum.)

Communicated by GEORGE GATFIELD.

To all and Singular vnto whom these presents shall come Sr Edward Walker, Knight Garter Principall King of Armes of Englishmen sendeth Greeting. It is most agreeable to Justice and reason that such persons as have well deserved of their Prince and Countrey, and have lived virtuously, and in good fame and reputation should have perticular Markes and rewardes to distinguish them from vulgar and inferior people, Amongst which the bearing of Armes, hath for many ages beene held in highest honor and esteeme, the which have beene distributed according to the worthynes of the persons to whom such Armes have beene assigned, as proper markes of honor whilest they live; and as fitt Inducements to stirr vp their Posterity to Equalize and exceede their Auncestors from whom they derive the same in all Noblenes and virtue. And whereas I am fully satisfyed that William Fisher of the Citty of London Merchant (Sonne of William Fisher of Litleover in the County of Derby, where that Family hath lived in reputation & esteeme) hath vpon all occasions in the late vnhappy times of distraction expressed his zeale and dutifull affection to the iust Interest of the Crowne, and his Maties most happy restauration whereby hee may iustly meritt some perticular testimony to evidence the same to Posterity Know yee therefore that I the said Sr Edward Walker Knight Garter Principall King of Armes by the powers & authority annexed vnto my Office of Garter, and confirmed vnto mee by Letters Patents vnder the Great Seale of England, Have given granted and assigned, and doe by these presents give grant and assigne vnto the said William Fisher the Coat of Armes and Creast hereafter mentioned, viz., Azure a Fesse imbatled Counterbatled betweene three Dolphins Or. And for his Creast vpon an Helmet proper Mantled Gules Doubled Argent, and Wreath of his Collours A Kingsfisher proper holding in the beake a Fish Or, as in the Margent hereof more lively is depicted. The which Armes and Creast the said William Fisher and the severall Descendants of his Body for ever (bearing their due and proper differences) may and shall lawfully vse, beare, & sett forth in Sheild, Coat Armour, Seale, Monument, or otherwise (according to the Law & practise of Armes) at all times, & vpon all occasions without the lett or molestation of any person whatsoever. In witness whereof I have herevnto subscribed my name, and affixed the Seale of my Office this Tenth day of November in the Twelfth yeare of the Reigne of our Soveraigne Lord Charles the Second by the Grace of God King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the faith, &c. An Examination of the English Ancestry of George Washington. By Henry F. Waters, A.M. Boston, U.S.A. 8vo.

We have to thank Mr. Waters for a far more interesting contribution to American genealogy than even his important discoveries relating to Harvard. The true descent of America's greatest citizen, George Washington, is a matter of much historical interest, not only to that nation which owes so much to his great genius, but to all who speak the English language. Only two inquiries into the genealogy of Washington, worth mentioning, precede Mr. Waters' investigations. One by Sir Isaac Heard, Garter King of Arms; the other by Colonel Joseph L. Chester. Colonel Chester's paper is a very complete examination of the conjectural pedigree of Sir Isaac Heard, put forward by Baker, the historian of Northamptonshire, as having been really proved, and which met with general acceptance till Colonel Chester (Herald and Genealogist, iv, 49-63) clearly showed that it was incorrect. Unfortunately he made no attempt to give a proved descent in its place, not having the necessary evidences. Mr. Waters takes up the parable where Colonel Chester laid it down, and, having discovered a certain amount of new information, constructs a pedigree, destined to prove that John and Lawrence Washington, the emigrants, were the sons of Lawrence Washington, Rector of Purleigh, in Essex, 1633—43, who must have died before January 1654—5, when Administration was granted to the effects of his widow, Amphillis. The difficulty of accepting the theory of Mr. Waters lies in the want of evidence of the identity of the Lawrence Washington who was Rector of Purleigh, with the Lawrence whose children were baptised at Tring. Then again, Mr. Waters fails to baptize John, the eldest son, who is the most important link in the pedigree, and about whom little appears, except Mr. Walters' assumption that it was he who administered to his mother, Amphillis. On the other hand, Mrs. Washington is buried at Tring, at a date which assuming that February, 1655, means 1654-5, and not 1655-6, tallies with the administration of Amphillis. At the time that the children of Lawrence Washington were baptized at Tring, Lawrence Washington, M.A., was Rector of Purleigh, a town some fifty miles away, and there is no evidence to show that he was non-resident; on the contrary, one would infer that he lived at Purleigh, because he was ejected on the plea that he frequented alehouses. Where? If not the alehouses at Purleigh, how would his accusers know that he did so, if he resided at Tring? Purleigh Registers begin in 1592, and according to the Parish Register Return appear to be deficient from 1632-1662. It does not appear that Mr. Waters took any steps to verify this statement in the Parish Register Return. If it is correct then Mr. Waters might have searched the Bishop's Transcripts. Then again the will or admōn. of the Rev. Lawrence Washington ought to be forthcoming. While we recognise with gratitude the persevering industry of Mr. Waters in hunting out every fact likely to throw light on the genealogy of his great countryman, we cannot forbear expressing the opinion that he has been

Where? If not the alehouses at Purleigh, how would his accusers know that he did so, if he resided at Tring? Purleigh Registers begin in 1582, and according to the Parish Register Return appear to be deficient from 1632-1654. It does not appear that Mr. Waters took any steps to verify this statement in the Parish Register Return. If it is correct then Mr. Waters might have searched the Bishop's Transcripts. Then again the will or admon. of the Rev. Lawrence Washington ought to be forthcoming. While we recognise with gratitude the persevering industry of Mr. Waters in hunting out every fact likely to throw light on the genealogy of his great countryman, we cannot forbear expressing the opinion that he has been somewhat precipitate in giving the result of his researches to the world. A little further investigation would probably have enabled him to substantiate his theory, and have proved the pedigree of Washington beyond all question. Had he waited a little longer and searched a little more he might have realized the pleasure described in the oft-quoted lines of Sir Cuthbert Sharp :—

> "Nor small the joy with eager eye to catch
> Some clinching date, or fix some dubious match,
> And on a point where Garter's self might err,
> Quote—fearless quote—the Parish Register."

We thank him sincerely for a most interesting and valuable addition to our genealogical knowledge, and trust that on his return to this country after a well earned holiday, he will complete his investigation, and bring it to a triumphant conclusion.

Ingleby Greenhow Register, 1539—1800. Canterbury (Cross and Jackman). Impl. 8vo.

It is a healthy sign of the times, to find that some of the Incumbents of our old Parish Churches, are beginning to realize the importance to the genealogical world of the Registers under their charge, and instead of allowing them to lie hidden in the parish chest, permit them to be transcribed and printed by those eager to take advantage of such a chance, or do it themselves. In this case our thanks are due to the Vicar of Ingleby Greenhow, Mr. Hawell, who has himself not only transcribed his Registers, but given in an Introduction, a large amount of information bearing upon his parish, and also two excellent illustrations of the interior of his church. He must have devoted much time and trouble on his work, and the result is in every way satisfactory. There is one thing we miss and which should accompany all Printed Parish Registers, where it is possible, namely the Monumental Inscriptions in the Church and Churchyard. Mr. Hawell, however has done his work well, and our only regret is that he had not a larger and more important Register to work upon. Although a small parish there are several entries of members of important families, such as Eure, Foulis and Ridley. Those who are intending to do similar work may well take a hint from the Register of Ingleby Greenhow.

The Parish Registers of Broseley, Shropshire, 1570—1700. Edited by Alfred F. C. C. Langley. London (Mitchell and Hughes). Impl. 8vo.

The town of Broseley, so well-known for its manufacture of clay pipes, has been selected by Mr. Langley, as the field of his exertions on behalf of his brother genealogists. The Registers are not extant before 1570, in which year there are but nine entries. The Parish seems to have increased in population very rapidly, for in 1602 the entries are more than trebled, and in 1700, the last year in this volume, there are about 110 entries. What appears somewhat remarkable, is that the Interregnum does not seem to have affected these Registers in any way, thus making them more complete than is usually the case. We hope soon to see the second volume of this transcript, which does Mr. Langley much justice and is a great addition to the shelves of collectors of Parish Registers.

Curious Inquisition.—I took the following notes of what I think is a curious inquisition, when going through the Chancery Files in the Record Office a few years ago. It was then in Bundle No. 870, but I believe they have been since re-arranged, and it may be in a different place.

Inquisition taken at Lambeth on 14th May, 16 James I. of England, France, and Ireland, and 51 of Scotland (1618), by John Middleton, esquire, sheriff of Surrey, and a jury, of the goods of John Stanbridge, citizen and vintner of London, for his debt of £400 to Robert Shawe, citizen and vinter. BENNET OF CHESTERS, CO. ROXBURGH.—The following extracts from a marriage contract may be of interest to "Investigator," who desired information on this family (vide p. 128.) The document is endorsed "Contract of Marreage Betwixt John Murray And Ann Bennet 1712." It begins thus—"At Chesters The Twinty nynth day of Aprill IMvii C and Twelve years It is matrimónially Contracted agreed and ended Betwixt the pairties following To Wit John Murray in Unthank on the ane pairt And Ann Bennet second lawfull daughter to Archbald Bennet of Chesters with the special advice and consent of the said Archbald Bennet her father And the said Archibald Bennet for himself and takeing burden in and upon him for the said Ann Bennet his said daughter And they both with ane advice, consent, and assent on the other pairt in maner underwriten That is to say" &c. Then follows the substance of the contract, the only part necessary to quote for the present purpose is a reference to "ane Band of provisione made and granted by the said Archibald Bennet and John Bennet his eldest lawfull sone with consent of Robert Bennet elder of Chesters now deceast, Thomas Rutherford of Wells and Robert Rutherford of Bowland their friends to the said Ann Bennet and the two other childrine ther in named of the date the seventeenth day of December IMviiC and ffive years and Regrat in the Shiref court books of Tiviotdaile upon the fourth day Jully IMviiC and six years."

There is near the finish a consent by both parties that "these presents be insert and Regrat in the books of Counsell and Sessione or any other judges books," and I suppose that this was done. The witnesses to this contract were, "Mr. John Cranstoune, minister of the Gospell att Ancrum, Andrew Bennet second lawfull son to the said Archbald Bennet of Chesters, and Thomas Ainslie writer and notar in Jedburgh." SCUTUM.

ABERCROMBY.—Is any one aware if the "Memoirs of the Family of Abercromby" is in existence? Burke's Peerage and other authorities state that it was written by Patrick Abercromby, author of the "Martial Achievements." C.

BATH ABBEY BURIALS.—Among these most interesting extracts occurs "1720 Dec. 30, Sir Conf^{t}. (Forsyth ?)." The person alluded to is "Sir Comport Fytche, 2^{d}. Bart.," who died 29th Dec. 1720. The Baronetcy, created in 1688, became extinct in 1736. "1724 June 13, the Honble. Lord Bucklee" refers to Richard Viscount Bulkeley. (See Mawson's Obits, p. 104.) CHARTER OF WILLIAM MALBANC.[1]

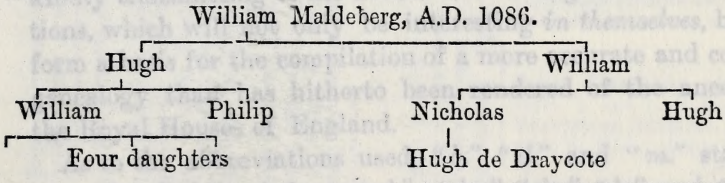
Willelmus Malbanc omnibus suis militibus et suis hominibus et omnibus suis ministris salutem. Sciatis me donasse 7 concessisse Huvieto septem panes palm̃o adquietatione totius thelonei intus et deforis excepto stalagio et theloneo salis 7 de theloneo salis iiii quadrigatas quietas in freudo (sic) et hereditate illi et suis heredibus libere et quiete et quando ibit cum merce (sic) suâ foris vel mittet mercem (sic) per suos homines et velit portare unam sumam salis vel dimidiam habeat illam quietam sine theloneo. Teste Philippo Malbanc et Nicolao filio Willelmi et Henrico de Cruha 7 Hugone filio Willelmi et Rodberto de Praheriis et Rodberto capellano et Nicolao capellano et Willelmo diacono et Willelmo Spulle 7 Rogero de Rap̃ et Edwardo 7 plures alii qui hoc audierunt et Willelmo capellano.

In this deed William Malbanc grants to Huviet seven loaves of bread of the best quality,[2] to be quit of all toll, both within and without (the liberty), excepting stallage,[3] and the toll of salt, and of the toll of salt, four cartloads free, to be held in fee and inheritance, and whenever he goes with his merchandize abroad, or sends his merchandize by his men, and wishes to carry a load of salt, or half a load, he can do so without toll.

The grantor, William Malbanc, was the Baron of Wich Malbank (now Nantwich) in Chesbire, and one of the principal feudatories of the Earls Palatine of Cheshire. He was the son of Hugh Malbanc, the founder of the Abbey of Combermere, and grandson of William Maldeberg, the Domesday tenant of the Barony. The Pipe Rolls shew he was dead in 22 Hen. II. His heirs were four daughters, amongst whom his large possessions were divided. An account of the Barony will be found in Ormerod's Cheshire, vol. 3, p. 27. The witnesses to the deed are first, Philip Malbanc, the grantor's brother; secondly, Nicholas, son of William, whom I take to be the ancestor of the Draycots, a knightly family of some importance in Staffordshire. By a deed of somewhat later date William Malbanc confirmed to Hugh, son of Nicholas de Draycote, the grant of the manors of Draycote, Cunsall, Newton, and Leye in Staffordshire. Both this witness and Hugh, son of William, were probably members of the grantor's family, and the pedigree seems to be as follows:—



GEORGE WROTTESLEY.

[1] The original is in the possession of Edward Walthall Delves Walthall, Esq., of Wistaton Hall, Cheshire.

[2] See Ducange for the meaning of Palmarius, we have still the same word in use in the vernacular expression—"to carry off the palm."

The Seize Quartiers of the Kings and Queens of England.

Preface.

It is proposed to issue, in two series, the seize quartiers (as far as their genealogies, not armorial ensigns, are concerned) of the Kings and Queens of England and their Consorts, from the time of Henry II to the present date. The first series will contain those of the House of Plantagenet (1154 to 1485) extending over a period of some 330 years, while the second series (the issue of which is commenced in this number) will contain the various dynasties which (beginning with the House of Tudor) have continued about 400 years since that period.

These descents are by no means perfect, many blanks will be found therein (more especially in the foreign genealogies with which the Compiler has little acquaintance) and various errors. They have been compiled with no very great care and labour, but only at leisure, and from such sources as readily presented themselves.

It is hoped that many a genealogically minded reader will be able to supply most of the said blanks and to correct such errors, kindly transmitting to the Editor of this Magazine such emendations, which will not only be interesting in themselves, but will form a basis for the compilation of a more accurate and complete genealogy than has hitherto been rendered of the ancestry of the Royal Houses of England.

As to the abbreviations used, "b." "d." and "m." stand for "born," "died," and "married"; "br." "da." "h." and "s." for "brother," "daughter," "heir," and "son"; while "cr." stands for "created," and "v.p." for "vitâ patris." G. E. C.

NOTES TO THE SECOND SERIES.

(1) The Father of Tudor ap Grono (who d. 1367) was Grono ap Tudor Captain of 20 archers in Aquitaine (who d. 1331) whose father was (another) Tudor ap Grono, of Pennynedd (who d. 1311) s. and h. of Grono ap Ednyfed Vychan, of Trefgastel, co. Anglesey, who was younger s. of Ednyfed Vychan ap Kendrig, of Brynffenigi, co. Denbigh. one of the most distinguished warriors in the wars of Llewellyn, Prince of North Wales, against John, King of England, and Randolph, Earl of Chester. A descent from the early Princes of South Wales (900 to 1200), thro' Gwenllian, da. of Rhys, Prince of South Wales (1197), wife to this Ednyfed, is given in Table DCIX of Betham's "Genealogical Tables," 1795, and in Table CCCCXCIV of Anderson's "Royal Genealogies," 1736.

(2) It was thro' the mother of this Margaret that Edmund (Tudor), Earl of Richmond, had any English descent whatever. This Lady was, Eleanor, da. of Llewellyn ap Griffith ap Tangwirst, by Katharine, da. of Llewellyn ap Griffith, PRINCE OF NORTH WALES (slain 1282) and Eleanor his wife, da. of the celebrated Simon (de Montfort), EARL OF LEICESTER. See references as in note "(1)."

(3) John of Gaunt, was heir male (presumptive) to his nephew Richard II, whom, however he predeceased by about a year. His son and heir, Henry IV, de facto King, since 30 Sep., 1399, became on the death of Richard II, 14 Feb. following, the (actual) heir male of all the preceding Kings of the house of Plantagenet. The right of the heir male to the crown had never yet been set aside in favour of the heir general; Constance of Bretagne was not considered de jure Queen, 1203 to 1241 (to the detriment of King John and Henry III) tho' unquestionably during those dates she was the heir general; while the accession (some 50 years previous) of Henry II was a mere matter of arrangement, rendered necessary by the total extinction of the heirs male of the Conqueror.

(4) An interesting account of the Swinford family, and of the issue of Katharine Roet, both by Sir Hugh Swinford and John of Gaunt, and the respective legitimation of each of her said issue, &c., is in "Excerpta Historica" (1831) pp. 152-159.

(5) It is probable that John Beaufort was born before the death (1372) of his mother's husband, Sir Hugh Swinford; indeed Richard III expressly says of him that he was "in double advoutrow [i.e. adultery] gotten." He himself was a Knight in 1391, while his younger brother (Henry) was a Bishop in 1397. The character of the mother may be gathered from the fact that the legitimacy of her son, Thomas Swinford, (undoubtedly born during her coverture) was questioned and had to be declared by letters patent, 5 Oct., 1411, before he could inherit as her heir. The whole of what Baker ("Chronicles" p. 141) calls the "valourous offspring," of John of Gaunt (i.e. the adulterous progeny born in his wife's lifetime) consisted of 3 sons and 1 daughter, viz., John as in the text (whose male issue became extinct in 1471) Thomas, the well-known Cardinal Beaufort (who d. unm. 1447) Thomas, Duke of Exeter (who d. s.p. 1426) and Joan, Countess of Westmorland. In Feb., 1397 all these were legitimated by Richard II, the proceeding being ratified by Parliament. This patent was confirmed by Henry IV, 10 Feb. 1407, with, however, the words "exceptâ dignitate regali," which appear then to have been added to the original enrolment, tho' not improbably, only ex abundanti cautela.

(6) See the "life of Margaret Beaufort, Countess of Richmond and Derby" by Caroline A. Halsted (1839). She was the Founder of St. John's College, Cambridge, &c., "the Venerable Margaret"— "Foremost and leaning from her golden cloud," commemorated by the poet Gray.

(7) The right of Henry VII to the Crown, as "Conqueror," is as unimpeachable as that of William I, after the slaughter of Harold at the battle of Hastings. Any plea of a hereditary right thereto is absurd. Assuming (for the sake of argument) that the legitimation (1397 and 1407) transformed the Beaufort-bastards into genuine Plantagenets, with full right to succession to the Crown, and assuming also that the right of the House of Lancaster to the Crown (they being heirs male though not heirs general) was correct (which assumptions favour the pretensions of the House of Tudor as far as is possible) yet, even then, Henry VII was not heir male of the House of Lancaster, and, consequently, was not the heir male, as that House had been (and had, by so being, obtained the Crown) of any of the preceding kings; still less was Henry VII the heir general (which, indeed, the House of Lancaster never was) to Henry II (the founder of the Plantagenet line), in right of whom each succeeding king had reigned.

It is to be observed, also, that though Henry VII claimed to be (as, indeed, setting aside the bastardy question, his mother, whom he prededeceased, actually was,) heir general (not, of course, heir male) to Henry IV and the House of Lancaster, such heirships could avail him nothing, as their right to the Crown was solely as heirs male, they not being heirs general thereof. Henry's sole descent (i.e. the legitimated one of the "double advoutrow") from any English king was through his mother, to whom (for "nemo est hæres viventis") he never was heir; that "venerable" Lady (who, if any right to the Crown, by descent, be allowed to the House of Tudor, at that epoch, must herself be classed as "Margaret, de jure Queen of England") not only surviving him, but never having resigned her shadowy right to him.

The father of Henry VII, Edmund Tudor (a Welshman, with a very small drop of English blood in his veins, see note (2)) was, indeed, uterine brother of Henry VI, but, in a question of descent and heirship, that relationship is hardly more to the purpose, that if they had been but foster brothers suckled by the same nurse.

(8) The right of Roger (Mortimer) Earl of March to the Crown (failing any issue of Richard II, the then reigning monarch), was through his mother Philippa, da. and h. of Lionel, Duke of Clarence, the next br. (who left issue) to Edward, the Black Prince, whose only child, the said king, was then childless.

Failing the king's issue, the Earl of March would be (as, in his right, Edmund, Earl of March, his son and heir, actually was, and as, also, was subsequently, Richard [Plantagenet] his grandson and heir), the heir general of Henry II, the founder of the Plantagenet line. This Richard, Duke of York, was, on 25 Oct., 1460, declared heir apparent to the

This patent was confirmed by Henry IV, 10 Feb. 1407, with, however, the words "except dignitate regali," which appear then to have been added to the original enrolment, the' not improbably, only as afterthought conceit.

(6) See the "life of Margaret Beaufort, Countess of Richmond and Derby" by Caroline A. Halsted (1839). She was the founder of St. John's College, Cambridge, &c., "the Nursing Mother" — "Foremost and leaning from her golden cloud," commemorated by the poet Gray.

(7) The right of Henry VII to the Crown, as "Conqueror," is as unimpeachable as that of William I, after the slaughter of Harold at the battle of Hastings. Any plea of a hereditary right thereto is absurd. Assuming (for the sake of argument) that the legitimation (1397 and 1407) transformed the Beaufort-bastards into genuine Plantagenets, with full right to succession to the Crown, and assuming also that the right of the House of Lancaster to the Crown (they being heirs male though not heirs general) was correct (which assumption favours the pretensions of the House of Tudor as far as is possible) yet, even then, Henry VII was not heir male of the House of Lancaster, and, consequently, was not the heir male, as that House had been (and had, by so being, obtained the Crown) of any of the preceding kings; still less was Henry VII the heir general (which, indeed, the House of Lancaster never was) to Henry II (the founder of the Plantagenet line), in right of whom each succeeding king had reigned.

It is to be observed, also, that though Henry VII claimed to be (as, indeed, setting aside the hereditary question, his mother, whom he proclaimed deceased, actually was,) heir general (not, of course, heir male) to Henry IV and the House of Lancaster, such heiresship could avail him nothing, as their right to the Crown was solely as heirs male, they not being heirs general thereof. Henry's sole descent (i.e. the legitimated one of the "double adventure") from any English king was through his mother, to wham (for "nemo est heres viventis") he never was heir; that "venerable" Lady (who, if any right to the Crown, by descent, be allowed to the House of Tudor, at that epoch, must forever be classed as "Margaret, de jure Queen of England") not only surviving him, but never having resigned her shadowy right to him.

The father of Henry VII, Edmund Tudor (a Welshman, with a very small drop of English blood in his veins, see note (21) was, indeed, uterine brother of Henry VI, but, in a question of descent and heiresship, that relationship is hardly more to the purpose, that if they had been but foster brothers suckled by the same nurse.

(8) The right of Roger (Mortimer) Earl of March to the Crown (failing any issue of Richard II, the then reigning monarch), was through his mother Philippa, da. and h. of Lionel, Duke of Clarence, the next br. (who left issue) to Edward, the Black Prince, whose only child, the said king, was then childless.

Failing the king's issue, the Earl of March would be (as, in his right, Edmund, Earl of March, his son and heir, actually was, and as, also, was subsequently, Richard [Plantagenet] his grandson and heir), the heir general of Henry II, the founder of the Plantagenet line. The Richard, Duke of York, was, on 25 Oct. 1460, declared heir apparent to the Crown, the rights of the reigning King, Henry VI (who though heir male was not heir general of his line), being respected, but the prospective rights of that king's son (or of any others) as heir male, being (for the first time in English History, see note (3) ante) set aside in favour of the heir general. The deposition of Henry VI (the heir male) in favour of Edward IV (s. and h. of the said Duke Richard), the heir general, took place 4 March, 1460/1, and, ten years later, by the wholesale slaughter at and after the battle of Tewkesbury, 21 May, 1471, the said Edward IV became heir male (as well as heir general) of the Plantagenet line, which line, however, in 14 years time, was expelled from the throne by Henry Tudor, and not many years afterwards (28 Nov., 1499,) became (after existing some 350 years) finally extinct.

(9) The pedigree of Wydville is very obscure. The best seems to be in Baker's "Northamptonshire," vol. ii, p. 166, to which the mark † (in the text) refers. In this the mother of Earl Rivers is said to be Joan Beauchamp; while in most others she is said to be Mary or Elizabeth Bedleygate. There is also a somewhat curious pedigree (inasmuch as it gives the arms) in a book (of no great authority) at the College of Arms, London, by Philpot, marked with a crescent, p. 138, to which the mark * (in the text) refers. The blazon of the arms therein assigned to the families connected with Wydville is as under—viz., for Cobron, "Arg., 3 lucies hauriant, within a bordure, engr., sa;" for Bedleygate, "or, on a bend, sa, 3 mallets, arg," and for Beauchamp, "Vaire, arg and azure."

(10) Illegitimacy was the reason alleged for the exclusion of the children of Edward IV from the Crown by their uncle Richard III. Their Father's marriage in 1464 with Elizabeth, Lady Grey, was then judged illegal (on account of that king's pre-contract with Lady Eleanor Butler,) and a proclamation was issued in 1484 speaking of her as "Dame Elizabeth Grey, late calling herself Queen of England." It is to be noted that "by the ancient canon law, a contract for marriage might be valid and perfect without the church ceremony; and second marriages were liable to be annulled on account of the existence of a pre-contract until the statute of 32 Hen. VIII rescinded the same"—Sharon Turner, iii, p. 463, as quoted in Halsted's "Life of Margaret Beaufort," p. 132.

Crown, the rights of the reigning King, Henry VI (who though heir male was not heir general of his line), being respected, but the prospective rights of that king's son (or of any others) as heir male, being (for the first time in English History, see note (3) ante) set aside in favour of the heir general. The deposition of Henry VI (the heir male) in favour of Edward IV (s. and h. of the said Duke Richard), the heir general, took place 4 March, 1460/1, and, ten years later, by the wholesale slaughter at and after the battle of Tewkesbury, 21 May, 1471, the said Edward IV became heir male (as well as heir general) of the Plantagenet line, which line, however, in 14 years time, was expelled from the throne by Henry Tudor, and not many years afterwards (22 Nov., 1499,) became (after existing some 350 years) finally extinct.

(9) The pedigree of Wydville is very obscure. The best seems to be in Baker's "Northamptonshire," vol. ii, p. 168,—to which the mark † (in the text) refers. In this the mother of Earl Rivers is said to be Joan Fauconberg; while in most others she is said to be Mary or Elizabeth Bedingfeld. There is also a somewhat curious pedigree (inscribed as it gives the arms) in a book (of no great authority) at the College of Arms, London, by Philipot, marked with a crescent, p. 138, to which the mark * (in the text) refers. The blazon of the arms therein assigned to the families connected with Wydville is as under—viz., for Coborn, "Arg., 3 lucies barwise," within a bordure, engr., as;" for Bedingfeld, "or, on a bend, az., 3 mullets, arg;" and for Beauchamp, "Vairé, arg and azure."

(10) Illegitimacy was the reason alleged for the exclusion of the children of Edward IV from the Crown by their uncle Richard III. Their father's marriage in 1464 with Elizabeth, Lady Grey, was then judged illegal (on account of that king's pre-contract with Lady Eleanor Butler), and a proclamation was issued in 1484 speaking of her as "Dame Elizabeth Grey, late calling herself Queen of England." It is to be noted that "by the ancient canon law, a contract for marriage might be valid and perfect without the church ceremony; and second marriages were liable to be nullified on account of the existence of a pre-contract until the statute of 32 Hen. VIII rescinded the same"—Sharon Turner, iii, p. 466, as quoted in Halsted's "Life of Margaret Beaufort," p. 132.

CANON SIR THEODORE DE ROBERTSART KNIGHT, A LEADER OF FREE COMPANIONS IN THE FOURTEENTH CENTURY.

By JOSEPH BAIN, F.S.A. Scot.

The mercenary soldiers, or Free Companions, who bore an important part in the European wars of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, are well-known to us from the pages of Froissart and other chroniclers. Sir Walter Scott in Quentin Durward and Anne of Geierstein makes allusion to them, with his acute instinct for the romance of history.

Some of their leaders, as Hawkwood, Calverley, Evan of Wales, &c., were men of mark. The name of the man who heads this paper, Robertsart, first came under my notice in Quentin Durward, where Le Balafré at his first meeting with his nephew, says to him.—"Fair nephew, I myself remember the Canon Robersart, who had taken the vows, and afterwards broke out of cloister and became a captain of Free Companions. He had a mistress, the prettiest wench I ever saw, and three as beautiful children." In Lord Berners' Froissart, he appears as the "Chanoyn of Robersart," and was a great leader first on the French side and latterly on the English, in the wars of Edward III and the Black Prince in south-western France. Nothing is there said of his being a churchman. Some years ago, I saw the following documents in the Public Records, which must relate to the same man, and shew that possibly his 'canonry' was only a nickname, or if not,

First Triple | Office, & K' of ye Bathe, the said Sr Gilbt Pryn | having leave by ye said Mary his wife seaven | children 2 sonnes & 5 daughr, 3rd of wch 2 | sonnes & 3 daughr are dead; the other 2 daughr | namely ye eldest of all Fraynces is married | to Sr Freveryx Steinover, K', youngest sonne of | ye Lord Heavelamp, sonne & heire to ye now | Earle of Hertford, & ye second daughr matched Steinover married to Sr George Hastings, K', | second brother to Henry now Erle of | Huntingdon. | He was buryed 7 June 21, 1627.

Second Epitaphe. A man in armour—a knee—a woman, in costume of period, holding a bough.

Ede man's a plant: and every tree
Ede man, is subject to mortalitie.

Five boughs lying down & a rose.

These branches dead & fallen away are gone
From ye vertil the Resurrection.

A man in armour and a woman in costume of the period either side of a gravel, each holding a bough—the arms repeated.

These prelled thus by wedlock's sacred dame,
(God grawte) may florrishe till those other come.

CANON SIR THEODORE DE ROBERTSART KNIGHT, A LEADER OF FREE COMPANIONS IN THE FOURTEENTH CENTURY.

By JOSEPH BAIN, F.S.A. Scot.

The mercenary soldiers, or Free Companions, who bore an important part in the European wars of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, are well-known to us from the pages of Froissart and other chroniclers. Sir Walter Scott in Quentin Durward and Anne of Geierstein makes allusion to them, with his acute instinct for the romance of history.

Some of their leaders, as Hawkwood, Calverley, Evan of Wales, &c., were men of mark. The name of the man who heads this paper, Robertsart, first came under my notice in Quentin Durward, where Le Balafré at his first meeting with his nephew, says to him—"Fair nephew, I myself remember the Canon Robersart, who had taken the vows, and afterwards broke out of cloister and became a captain of Free Companions. He had a mistress, the prettiest wench I ever saw, and three as beautiful children." In Lord Berners' Froissart, he appears as the "Chanoyn of Robersart," and was a great leader first on the French side and latterly on the English, in the wars of Edward III and the Black Prince in south-western France. Nothing is there said of his being a churchman. Some years ago, I saw the following documents in the Public Records, which must relate to the same man, and show that possibly his 'canonry' was only a nickname, or if not, that he had got a dispensation from his vows, and left at least one lawful son. The earliest notice I have found of him is in the Patent Roll, 3 Ric. II[1].—an exemplification by that king of (1) an Inspeximus and confirmation by his grandfather, Edward III, dated 25 Nov. 1370, of letters patent by his son [in law] Ingelram, Count of Bedford and Soisson, Lord of Coucy, bearing that he had formerly granted to Canon Robertsart chevalier, 'huit vins frans'[2] of France, including the profits of his (de Coucy's) mill in the vill 'ou terroir' of Marcey, but for certain reasons had resumed this, and instead had given him 40 marks sterling out of his possessions in England, 'tant et si longement come le dit Canoune ara la vie naturele respirant en son corps tant soulement' (in other words for his life only). Done at Prague en Boheme, 14 January, 1369; and, (2) of an Indenture between William, prior of Kirkby Monachorum, in the diocese of Lichfield, a dependency of St. Nicholas, near Angers, of the Benedictine Order, and his convent, and Theodore de Robertsart dictus 'Canon' chevalier, of the diocese of Cambrai,' granting the latter their house in England for twenty-five years from Michaelmas, 1376, in consideration of a certain amount received by them from the said knight, who is also to give a cloth of gold annually on St. John Baptist's day for the ornament of the Priory Church, to keep up the houses at his own cost, and perform other conditions.

The next document relating to him is a Fiat for a protection for a year for Theodore nuncupatus Canon de Robersart, knight, going in the king's service beyond seas, and John Alderyngton, esquire. Westminster, 16 April, 4 Ric. II (1381)[3]

The last is a release and quit-claim by John de Robessart, son and heir of Canon de Robessart miles, to Richard, King of England and John de Moreby, prior of the lately founded house of the Visitacio Matris Dei, in the isle of Axiholm, of the Carthusian Order, of all his right in the manor or priory of Kirkby Monachorum in the county of Warwick, &c. Done under his seal at London, on Saturday the vigil of Easter, 20 Ric. II [21 April, 1397]; and recognisance by John de Robessart in chancery at Westminster, on 2 March, 1401-2.[4] There is also on same roll (m. 6 dorso) an Indenture in Norman French, between Sir John de Robessart and the Prior, executed 19 March, 22 Ric. II (1398-99.)

The grant by Ingelram de Coucy at Prague in Bohemia would imply that de Robessart may afterwards have been one of the army of Free Companions with which he attempted to enforce his claims on the house of Austria, so picturesquely described in Anne of Geierstein. Not many years ago, the citizens of Berne celebrated the anniversary of their forefathers' victory over these roving warriors, whom they were pleased to call Englishmen, though as Sir Walter says, and history confirms him, they were of various countries.[5]

It seems therefore, whatever the Canon's original profession may have been, that he became a layman and knight, and left one lawful son, Sir John de Robessart. Whether this family had anything to do with the Cornish Robsarts of whom came Amy, Countess of Leicester, immortalized in Kenilworth, I do not know.

Done under his seal at London, on Saturday the vigil of Easter, 20 Rich. GEORGE BURNETT, ESQ., LLD., ADVOCATE, LYON KING OF ARMS.

The death of M^r. Burnett, which occurred—from inflammation of the lungs—on the 23rd of January, brings to a close the career of a singularly earnest, lovable and learned man. It is not too much to say that he was a profound genealogist and that few persons had a wider knowledge of heraldry—both British and Continental.

George Burnett belonged to the Kenmay branch of the Burnetts of Leys, of which the two best known members are Gilbert Burnett, Bishop of Salisbury, the adviser of William III. and the author of the well-known History, and Lord Monboddo, the eccentric Scottish Judge, whose alleged belief that human beings were born with tails, is his least, though probably his most popular claim to distinction. The late Lyon King was born in 1822, and was admitted to the Scottish Bar in 1845. After eighteen years' attendance at the Parliament House, where the memory of Walter Scott was still comparatively green, and where he had for associates men like Hill Burton, Cosmo Innes, and William Edmonstoune Aytoun, he was appointed, in 1863, Depute Lyon under the Earl of Kinnoull, who was then titular chief of the office in virtue of hereditary right. It may be supposed that whilst he was at the bar he had not wasted his time in idly strolling the boards of the Parliament House for want of other work. He had the treasures of the Advocates Library at his hand, and made diligent use of his opportunities; so that when he went into the Lyon Office he was at once felt to be the right man in the right place. He got his chance soon. Lord Kinnoull died in 1866, and by an Act of Parliament passed in the following year, the Lyon Office which had not been in a satisfactory state for some time, was put on a different footing, and Mr. Burnett was appointed Lyon King of Arms. It is needless to point out in the pages of the GENEALOGIST—to which Mr. Burnett was at one time a frequent and valued contributor—what an amount of learning and industry he brought to bear on the duties of his office. With his friend, Mr. Robert Stodart, as Lyon Clerk Depute he worked cordially and well. Their stores of knowledge as learned genealogists and accomplished heralds were ever at the disposal of enquirers for all legitimate purposes. The number of questions put to Mr. Burnett must have been enormous and their character most varied; in any difficulty which an investigator into family history or antiquities might have he was pretty safe in appealing to the Lyon King; only once, it is said, did he confess himself unable at the moment to answer his inquirer's question, and that was when someone entered his office bearing a horoscope and asked his interpretation of it! Besides the ordinary duties of his office, however, Mr. Burnett found time for much literary work. In 1865 he published "Popular Genealogists, or the Art of Pedigree Making" a trenchant exposure of the inventors of pedigrees; a few years afterwards he wrote "The Red Book of Menteith, Reviewed," and at the time of his death he had almost finished a work on the Great Seals of Scotland, while a history of his own family—for the Spalding Club—was in an advanced state of preparation. But the task to which he devoted himself, with that energy which was so

Their stores of knowledge as learned genealogists and accomplished heralds were ever at the disposal of enquirers for all legitimate purposes. The number of questions put to Mr. Burnett must have been enormous and their character most varied; in any difficulty which an investigator into family history or antiquities might have he was pretty sure in appealing to the Lyon King; only once, it is said, did he confess himself unable at the moment to answer his inquirer's question, and that was when someone entered his office bearing a horoscope and asked his interpretation of it! But the task to which he devoted himself, with that energy which was so characteristic of the man, was the editing of the Exchequer Rolls of Scotland. Since 1878 he has produced twelve bulky volumes of these, each with a historical preface, which—for fulness of information, insight into the feelings of the times, and exhaustive research—leaves nothing to be desired. To all serious students of Scottish history they are simply invaluable, throwing as they do, a flood of light upon the most obscure period of the annals of that country. For his own sake it could be wished that he had spared himself a little more in the preparation of these volumes. The ardour and energy with which he threw himself into the work was almost too much for a frame never robust and latterly weakened by repeated attacks of illness. But his heart was in his work and he died in harness.

It is not often given to those who tread the thorny paths of genealogy to go through life without having some difference of opinion with their fellow creatures, and Mr. Burnett was no exception to the rule. But he had the courage of his opinions and never flinched from stepping into the arena of controversy if it was really required. But while his rapier thrusts were keen and severe he never lost his temper or forgot that he was a gentleman in the highest sense of the word. He was always fair and courteous to an opponent, though his attack was apt to be terribly damaging. But though he did not fear controversy he did not court it, and, while there might be those who differed from his opinions, we doubt if he ever made a personal enemy in his life.

Of his private character it may be said that it was absolutely blameless. Of a somewhat shy and unassuming disposition, he required to be known before he could be thoroughly appreciated. He was not in any sense a "society" man, but a true scholar, his heart being in his books and in his work. He refused, it is said, the titular dignity which is usually bestowed on the Kings of Arms partly from inherent modesty, and partly, perhaps, because he felt that the slender allowance, which it pleased Parliament to attach to his office, was not sufficient worthily to support such a position. In 1884 the University of Edinburgh conferred upon him the degree of LL.D. But apart from his professional attainments, Mr. Burnett was a man of no small degree of culture; He loved art in all its branches, and was a skilled critic of music, and it is believed that not a few of the musical critiques in the leading Edinburgh newspaper were from his pen.

It is sad to think that such faithful and earnest work should have come to an end. Proud of his ancient office and all its associations he has left an example of devotion to duty and singleness of aim which it will be hard for his successor, whoever he may be, to emulate, and impossible to surpass.

yr. son of Godfrey III, Duke of Lothaine. His sister Mary, bas. of P. and G., w. Philip Count of Vianden in Luxembourg, who d. 1272. Their son Godfrey Count of V., Sire de P., had assumed the arms of P., Gu. a lesse Arg., in place of those of Vianden, Gu. an escutcheon Arg., as early as 1277. (B. I. 627—629, pennon 110).

384. DE CUNEYAUD.—John Sire d'Auberoche and Pamele in Périgueux (1242), and de Rosay in Touraine. Here. 1. Alice dau. of John II, Count of Soissons; 2. Matilda, sister of Robert Sire de Creseques, and widow of Gerard de Pequigny, Vidame d'Amiens. He d. about 1292. (M. de Dreux 115; B. I. 605; Carpentier, III. 1297.)

387. SIR DE ASCUE.—William de Grimberg II., Sire d'Ascue near Brussels (1258), great grandson of Gerard Sire de Grimberg, who was yr. brother of Walter Berthout II., Sire de Malines. He m. Sybil, dau. of Robert Sire de Wavrin, Seneschal of Flanders, and widow of Arnoul Sire de Cysoing, and was yet living in 1288. Or a lesse Az. and a saltire Gu. (B. II. 68, 72, 165, supp. I. 158).

388. JOHAN SOY FRERE.—He was at the battle of Woeringen in 1288. (B. II. 159).

389. SIR DE WANTENAYT.—Wandripont in Flandres. In 1242 the Sires de W. and des Cordes sold their barony of Rosnais near Audenarde to the Count of Flandres. The subsequent history of the family is fragmentary and obscure. (Carpentier, III. 432; Espinoy, 141).

390. SIR DE WOCKEIN.—Wocastine. Gu. a chevron Erm. were the arms of the Sires de Ghistelles, Chamberlains of Flandres, who were also Sires de la Wocastine by the marriage of John III. Sire de G. and Ermengelle (1276, 1293) with Isabel dau. and her. of Philip Sire de la W. (Espinoy, 123, 127, 184).

392. SIR SAXSON.—Verhaye's Sohier or Sigier. The bisaure of a lis on the chief was adopted by many members of the family of Gand, e.g., Roger de Cherbout (seal, 1241), and Bernard de Mezen (seal, 1266), both, yr. sons of Sigier II. Châtelain de Gand. The pennon intended may be Sigier, yr. son of Hugh I., but I find no record of his difference. (M. de Gand 328, 337, 343, pennon 41; 317).

393. HAMON LE DRAKE.—Gerard le Diable de Gand, a yr. son of Sigier II. Châtelain de G. His seals (1218, 1234) bear G. bisaured with a lion pass. or with a label. He m. Elizabeth de Stote, dau. of a burgher of Gand, and was father of Gerard called Sauvels (devil's son) who d. after 1323, s.p. (M. de Gand 326, 453, pennon 310).

395. WILLIAM DE BETUS.—See No. 422. William III. Sire de Looreis was styled indifferently de Béthune and de Looreis; the bisaure of a lion pass. is not assigned to him, but it occurs on the seal (1214) of his uncle Giles Sire de Allombeque, who d. s.p. about 1247. (M. de Béthune 232, 262, pennon 158, 168).

396. SIR DE HOCKSCOTE.—Peter Sire de Houdescote (Houdestoten) in Flandres had succeeded his father William II. before 1288. (Carpen-

397. Sir de Fones.—William II. Sire de Fiennes in Guines and de Tingry in the Boulonnais (1265—1302) also possessed the manors of Wendover co. Bucks. and Clapham co. Surrey (Esc. 30 Edw. I. no. 33). He m. (1269) Blanche, Dame de Louplande in Maine, dau. of John de Brienne d'Acre, Butler of France. (M. de. Chât. 289; A. VI. 134, 169). Arg. a lion ramp. Sa. From Simon [No. 271], said to have been his yr. brother, the Fienes, Barons Say, were descended.

398. Sir de Antonye.—Perhaps a member of the family of the Sires d'Antoing in Hainault, who bore Gu. a lion ramp. Arg. (Vinchant,[1] 221; Carpentier, III. 90).

401. William de Ronti.—Rodde in Picardy. (Rietstap).

402. Sir de Ronty.—Renty in Artois. Isabel, dau. and hr. of Andrew Sire de R. and Seneghem, m. (1354) William I. Sire de Croy and Airaines. Arg. 3 battleaxes Gu., the two in chief addorsed. (A. V. 636).

404. Hugh de St Poel.—He succeeded his father Guy II. as Count of St Pol in 1289, and in Jan. 129½ his cousin Jane de Châtillon in the comté de Blois; he then discontinued the brisure of a label Az. He m. Beatrix dau. of Guy Count of Flanders, and d. about 1307. His crest was a wyvern (seal, 1299). (M. de Chât. 129—135, preuves 95; A. VI. 98; D. II. 625, 777).

405. Guy de Sein Poel.—Guy III., to whom his brother Hugh ceded the comté de St. Pol in 1292. He m. (1292) Mary dau. of John II. Duke of Brittany, and d. 6 Apr. 1317. He bore Châtillon, a label of 5 points Az. On his secretum (1308) is a shield charged with three men's heads in profile. (M. de Chât. 275—280, preuves 164; A. VI. 106; D. II. 777).

406-7. Gyles and Johan de Mally.—Mailly in the Amiénois. For axes Gu. read mallets Vert. Giles II. Sire de M. (1252, 1299) m. Jane dau. of Thibaut d'Amiens, Sire de Vignacourt, and left 4 sons:—1. John,[2] ancestor of the Marquises de Mailly; 2. Anthony, of the Sires of Conty; 3. Giles, of those of Autheuille; 4. John, of those of Nedon. The 3 yr. altered the colour of the charges to Gu., Az. and Sa., respectively. (La Morliere, Maisons de Picardie 233; A. VIII. 628; Moréri, VII. 76).

408. Bawldwyne de Roillautautt.—Rolaincourt in Artois. This was perhaps Baldwin de R., 'le Moine' (1269), who m. Ricuine de Moulin. (Carpentier, III. 956, 972). Mary, hss. of R., m. John de Châtillon, Sire de Dampierre; on her seal (1335), [Arg.] 3 mallets erect [Gu.], and Châtillon, the chief charged for difference with two lions pass. affrontés[3] [Sa.] (M. de Chât. 379, preuves 224).

409. Le Chasteleine de Araz.—The Châtelains of Arras are said by Carpentier, but on slight evidence, to have been descended from the Béthunes, Avoués d'Arras.

[1] Vinchant, Annales d'Haynau, fol. 1648.

[2] It is pretended that he m. Jane dau. of Enguerrand III, Sire de Coucy; this is unlikely chronologically; moreover, there is no mention of any such dau. either in Le Lignage de Coucy written in 1303, or in the Chron. of Baudouin d'Avesnes (1289).

397. Sir de Fosses.—William II. Sire de Fismes in Guines and de Tingry in the Boulonnais (1250—1302), also possessed the manors of Wendover co. Bucks. and Clapham co. Surrey (Ass. 30 Edw. I. no. 33). He m. (1269) Blanche, Dame de Longueville in Maine, dau. of John de Brienne d'Acre, Butler of France, (M. de Coët. 389; ✠. VI. 134, 152); Arg. a lion ramp. Sa. From Simon [No. 271] said to have been his yr. brother, the Fiennes, Barons Say, were descended.

398. Sir de Azrosyre.—Perhaps a member of the family of the Sires d'Autoing in Hainault, who bore Gu. a lion ramp. Arg. (Vinchant, 221; Carpentier, III. 90).

401. Willaim de Roxti.—Rodde in Tickerly. (Hietsing).

402. Sir de Roxty.—Rosty in Artois. Isabel, dau. and hr. of Andrew Sire de R. and Scenghem, m. (1354) William I. Sire de Croy and Airaines. Arg. 3 battleaxes Gu., the two in chief addorsed. (✠. V. 656).

404. Hugh de St Poer.—He succeeded his father Guy II. as Count of St Pol in 1289, and in Jan. 1293 his cousin Jane de Châtillon in the county de Blois; he then discontinued the bearing of a label Az. He m. Beatrix dau. of Guy Count of Flandres, and d. about 1307. His crest was a wyvern (seal, 1299). (M. de Coët. 129—132, pennes 95; ✠. VI. 96; ✠. II. 625, 777).

405. Guy de Saint Poer.—Guy III., to whom his brother Hugh ceded the county de St. Pol in 1292. He m. (1292) Mary dau. of John II. Duke of Brittany, and d. s. p. 1317. He bore Châtillon, a label of 5 points Az. On his secretum (1308) is a shield charged with three men's heads in profile. (M. de Coët. 275—280, pennes 164; ✠. VI. 100; ✠. II. 777).

406-7. Guyes and Jonas de Mally.—Mally in the Ardennes. For axes Gu. read mailets Vert. Giles II. Sire de M. (1252, 1290) m. Jane dau. of Thibaut d'Amiens, Sire de Vieuxcourt, and left 4 sons:—1. John,[1] ancestor of the Marquises de Mally; 2. Anthony, of the Sires of Conty; 3. Giles, of those of Antheuille; 4. John, of those of Nedon. The 3 yr. altered the colour of the charges to Gu., Az. and Sa. respectively. (La Morlière, Maisons de Picardie 282; ✠. VIII. 625; Morini, VII. 76).

408. Bawdwyne de Bollaeuttutt.—Rodincourt in Artois. This was perhaps Baldwin de R., le Moine (1252). Mary, dau. of R., m. John de Moulin. (Carpentier, III. 956, 972). Mary, dau. of R., m. John de Châtillon, Sire de Dampierre; on her seal (1285), [Arg.] 3 mailets erect [Gu.], and Châtillon, the chief charged for difference with two lions pass. affronté[2] [Sa.] (M. de Coët. 378, pennes 224).

409. Sir Chastelayn de Aras.—The Châtelains of Arras are said by Carpentier, but on slight evidence, to have been descended from the Bethunes, Avoués d'Arras.

[1] Vinchant, Annales d'Hainaut, fol. 1618.

[2] It is pretended that he m. Jane dau. of Enguerrand III. Sire de Coucy; this is unlikely chronologically; moreover, there is no mention of any such dau. either in Le Longue de Coucy written in 1303, or in the Chron. of Baudouin d'Avesnes (1328).

[3] 'Jonans de la pete,' as an old Flemish d'Arcy's expresses it.

410. Eustace de Nouevile.—Eustace, 'le Jeune', Sire de Neufville-Witasse [=Eustace] in Artois, m. (after 1247) Beatrix dau. of Robert Sire de Hebuterne, and widow of William de Béthune II., Sire de Locres. On his seal (1255), [Or] fretty [Gu.] and a canton.[1] (M. de Bethune 268, preuves 166).

412. Le Sire de Harcitnett.—Probably Hargicourt in Picardy; the same arms, Erm. a chief Gu., were borne by Goussancourt of Picardy, and by the Sires de Roubaix in Flanders.

413. Le Chasteleins de Lens.—Baldwin Châtelain de Lens in Artois, Sire de Camblain; or his son John II., who m. the hss. of Robecque. (A. VIII. 29). Quarterly Or and Sa. Devise:—La lenteur avance souvent plus.

415. Robart de Bretayne.—Robert (a yr. son of Giles Sire de Beaumetz, Châtelain de Bapaume) was surnamed de Bretagne, having been brought up at the court of the Duke of Brittany his cousin. He m. Mabel dau. of Alan V. Vicomte de Rohan. The arms of Beaumetz were Gu. a cross engr. Or. (M. de Coucy 218; M. de Dreux 37; Carpentier, III. 203; A. II. 7, IV. 53).

416. Anviers Longevall.—Aubert, Sire de Longueval in Santerre (Picardy), m. Anne, Dame de Croissy in Brie, dau. of Amauri de Meullent, Sire de Gournay-sur-Marne. He was killed in the war with Arragon in 1285, according to G. de Nangis. (M. de Harcourt 176, 931, preuves 211, 1626[2]). He was ancestor of the Princes de Longueval, Counts of Bucquoy. Bendy of 6 Vair and Gu. Cri:—Dragon! (Carpentier, III. 737).

417. Bawldwyne de fflanders.—Third son of Guy Count of Flanders; he d. unm. in 1296. (A. II. 731).

418. Johan Dampiers.—John II. Sire de Dampierre in Champagne, St. Dizier and Sompuis (1259—1307), grandson of William de D. by Margaret Countess of Flanders. He m. Margaret dau. of Alphonse de Brienne d'Acre, Chamberlain of France.[3] Or a lion ramp. Sa., a label of 5 points Gu. (M. de Chât. 358; M. de Dreux 67; A. II. 760).

419. Le Senischall de Flandres.—Robert Sire de Wavrin, Seneschal of Flanders, m. (after 1247) Mahaut, dau. of William de Béthune I., Sire de Locres, and widow of John III. Châtelain de Lille; he appears to have been living in 1267.[4] (M. de Bethune 255, preuves 162).

421. Le Cunstable de fflanders.—Maline de Materne was Constable of Flanders in 1261. (Espinoy, 299). Or an escutcheon Gu. He was probably son of Maline de M., who bore an escutcheon and a label of 5 points (seal, 1229). (M. de Gand, preuves 495).

[3] That he m. Isabel dau. of John Count of Eu (L'Art de V. les Dates, &c.) seems based on a misapprehension. This Isabel, says the Chron. de l'Abbaye de Foucarmont, "fu mariée au Seigneur de Piqueny et de Dompierre en la riviere de Somme, assez prés d'Abbeville en Ponthieu." The Chron. d'Eu also says "au Sire de Piqueny" (i.e. to Renaud de P., Vidame d'Amiens).

[4] The pedigree of the family of Waurin compiled by Jean Scohier in 1582, and given by Anselme, VI. 702-713, is at variance with nearly every fact known for certain about the family. More trustworthy details as to the earlier generations are given by Carpentier and by Duchesne.

410. Bystace de Neuville.—Eustace, 'le Jeune,' Sire de Neufville-Villasse [=Eustace] in Artois, m. (after 1217) Beatrix dau. of Robert Sire de Habutorne, and widow of William de Béthune II., Sire de Locres. On his seal (1235), [Or] freely [Gu.] and a canton. (M. de Belleme 502, pressee 166).

412. Le Sire de Hancesset.—Probably Hargicourt in Picardy; the same arms, Ren. a chief Gu., were borne by Gonsaucourt of Picardy, and by the Sires de Hombaix in Flandres.

413. Le Chastelleins de Lens.—Baldwin Châtelain de Lens in Artois, Sire de Cambrain; or his son John II., who m. the bas. of Hobecque. (Ch. VIII. 29). Quarterly Or and Sa. Devise:—La lenteur avance souvent plus.

415. Ronaks de Bussayne.—Robert (a yr. son of Giles Sire de Beaumets, Châtelain de Hapsenne) was surnamed de Brotegne, having been brought up at the court of the Duke of Brittany his cousin. He m. Mabel dau. of Alan V. Vicomte de Robon. The arms of Beaumets were Gu. a cross engr. Or. (M. de Gouey 218; M. de Dreux 37; Carpentier, III. 203; Ch. II. 7, IV. 53).

416. Adynias Lozoneyalla.—Aubert, Sire de Longueval in Santerre (Picardy), m. Anne, Dame de Croisey in Brie, dau. of Amaury de Meulient, Sire de Gournay-sur-Marne. He was killed in the war with Aragon in 1285, according to G. de Nangis. (M. de Jouvenel 176, 931, pressee 211, 1020?). He was ancestor of the Princes de Longueval, Counts of Bacquoy. Barry of 6 Vair and Gu. Cri:—Dieu ! (Carpentier, III. 731).

417. Hawlwyne de Flandres.—Third son of Guy Count of Flanders; he d. unm. in 1290. (Ch. II. 731).

418. Johan Daniers.—John II. Sire de Dampierre in Champagne, St. Didier and Bonnelle (1239—1307), grandson of William de D. by Margaret Countess of Flanders. He m. Margaret dau. of Alphonse de Brienne d'Acre, Chamberlain of France. Or a lion rampt. Sa., a label of 5 points Gu. (M. de Chât. 358; M. de Dreux 67; Ch. II. 760).

419. Le Seisnechal de Flandres.—Robert Sire de Wavrin, Seneschal of Flanders, m. (after 1217) Mahaut, dau. of William de Béthune I., Sire de Locres, and widow of John III. Châtelain de Lille; he appears to have been living in 1267. (M. de Belleme 255, pressee 102).

421. Le Chastelleins de Malines.—Malines de Matterne was Constable of Flanders in 1281. (Espinoy, 299). Or an escutcheon Gu. He was probably son of Malines de M., who bore an escutcheon and a label of 5 points (scot, 1229). (M. de Gouey, pressee 195).

A Catalogue of Fifty of the Norfolk Manuscripts in the Library of Mr. William Rye. 1889. Folio.

Mr. Rye who has for some years made the history of Norfolk his specialty, adds to his already large list yet another volume in the form of a catalogue of some of his much prized manuscripts relating to that county. Its object is made clear to the reader by a few words at the commencement, and all who are interested in the Genealogy and Antiquities of Norfolk are generously invited by him, to inspect the originals at his house at Putney.

It is impossible in a limited space to do full justice to a work which must have occupied much time and taken considerable trouble to compile, or to enumerate the many treasures of which it speaks. One paragraph, however, we note with particular interest, relating to the manuscript of the histories of East and West Flegg, Happing, Tunstead, and North Erpingham, which has been ready for the press for upwards of one hundred and fifty years. This important collection, besides other MSS., Mr. Rye now proposes to print and as it consists of more than 1600 pages it will be published in no less than four volumes.

Among the many quaint illustrations, produced in facsimile, is a curious rebus of Beardewelle, once in the possession of the Rev. Francis Blomefield, the Topographer of Norfolk, whose book-plate, with that of Sir John Fenn by Bartolozzi, is also shown.

Although modestly called a Catalogue, there is much interesting matter, which we should not expect to find in a book so styled, and to make it quite complete Mr. Rye has supplied three good indexes.

THE MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS OF ST. MARY, LEWISHAM.—Edited by HERBERT CHARLES KIRBY, and LELAND LEWIS DUNCAN. Lee: (Charles North.) Impl. 8vo.

The great importance of monumental inscriptions for the purposes of genealogy, is so generally admitted, that it is needless to point out the value of this volume, which contains all the inscriptions to be found in the old and new church and churchyard of St. Mary, Lewisham. In the preface we read, "when the church was re-built, most of the monuments, after remaining some time in the chapel of Colfe's Almshouses, were placed in the vaults, and have now nearly all disappeared. Why they were not re-erected in the present church must ever remain as much a mystery as it is a matter for regret." This lament, thanks to the Church Restorer, is becoming unfortunately too common, and much might be done if the example set by the Lewisham Antiquarian Society is followed by those who are anxious to preserve their local records, and print memorials which the hand of time is gradually effacing, or which are too often wilfully destroyed by men incapable of appreciating their value. Being a joint production, this volume must necessarily command greater confidence, in point of accuracy, than is usually the case, and Messrs. Kirby and Duncan are to be congratulated on the arrangement of their work, giving as it does every facility to the reader. We look forward with pleasure to the prospective publications of a Society, which, although dealing with only a small area, is doing excellent work for the history of its County.

NOTES ON THE VISITATION OF LINCOLNSHIRE, 1634. By A. GIBBONS. Lincoln: (James Williamson). 8vo.

It is with sincere pleasure we welcome in this the first number of Notes on the Lincolnshire Visitation of 1634, the beginning of a work which must prove of considerable value to all genealogists.

This form of annotation is particularly useful not only as a supplement to pedigrees of vital importance to genealogy but as correcting errors which are to be found even in such accepted evidences as Heralds' visitations.

In addition to the Notes, Mr. Gibbons is giving to the first sixty subscribers Indexes to the Wills in the Dean and Chapter's Court and other Courts at Lincoln.

paragraph, however, we note with particular interest, relating to the manuscript of the histories of East and West Fleg, Happing, Tunstead, and North, Epingham, which has been ready for the press for upwards of one hundred and fifty years. This important collection, besides other MSS., Mr. Hye now proposes to print and as it consists of more than 1600 pages it will be published in no less than four volumes.

The Monumental Inscriptions of St. Mary, Lewisham.—Edited by Herbert Chanter, Kirby, and Lilian Lewis Dyeson. Lee: (Charles North.) Impl. 8vo.

The great importance of monumental inscriptions for the purposes of genealogy, is so generally admitted, that it is needless to point out the value of this volume, which contains all the inscriptions to be found in the old and new church and churchyard of St. Mary, Lewisham. Why they were not re-erected in the present church must ever remain as much a mystery as it is a matter for regret." This lament, thanks to the Church Rectory, is becoming unfortunately too common, and much might be done if the example set by the Lewisham Antiquarian Society is followed by those who are anxious to preserve their local records, and print memorials which the hand of time is gradually effacing, or which are too often wilfully destroyed by men incapable of appreciating their value. THE WRIOTHESLEY TOMB IN TITCHFIELD CHURCH. By BENJAMIN W. GREENFIELD, F.S.A., Barrister-at-Law. 8vo.

Many of our readers must be well acquainted with this paper, which first appeared in "The Proceedings of the Hampshire Field Club," but those who have not had an opportunity of reading it will find much interesting matter therein. Mr. Greenfield has extracted all the information to be derived from documents bearing upon his subject, among which may be mentioned two papers of Robert Glover, Somerset Herald, in the Ashmolean MSS. at Oxford, one of which is a draft pedigree of Wriothesley, and the other a detailed statement of the charges for the funeral of Henry, second Earl of Southampton, the founder of this monument. The sum given as the cost of this tomb is said to be equivalent to more than £10,000 at the present time, so that some idea may be formed as to its magnificence by those who have not as yet seen it. There are two tabulated pedigrees given, showing the acquisition of quarterings in the Wriothesley shield and the twenty-two quarterings in the shield of Mary Browne, wife of Henry, second Earl, which appear on the tomb. Among the illustrations are three very clear photographs which add considerably to the pleasure of the perusal of this little pamphlet.

GENEALOGY OF THE FAMILY OF HARVEY, OF FOLKESTONE, &c. By WILLIAM J. HARVEY, F.S.A. SCOT. 4to.

The compiler of this genealogy has expended great care in putting together in tabular form an interesting pedigree, beginning with the father of William Harvey the discoverer of the circulation of blood. The genealogy as it stands at present is of course merely a statement, although some authorities are given in the notes which appear at the end. The evidences, we understand, will be issued shortly as a separate work, and these two are intended as precursors of a much larger history of this family.

Notes and Queries.

ACTON OF GATACRE PARK.—The short pedigree of this family on p. 77 is wrong in making Clement Acton ancestor of the present Actons of Gatacre.

Thomas Acton (second son of Sir Edward Acton, Bart.,) married by licence, dated 10 December, 1661, Mabel, daughter of Clement Stonor, and by her had issue (with others) two sons, Thomas and Clement. The former was father, by Mary his wife, of a son Edward of Gatacre, who, by Anne his wife, had issue three daughters and coheiresses, viz., Mabel m. to Rowland Hill of Ribbesford, Bewdley, co. Worcester, and ob. s.p.; Frances, bapt. at Claverley 22 April, 1747, m. to Elijah Barrar of Stourbridge; and Mary m. to Peter Habberley.[1]

Notes and Queries.

ACTON OF GATACRE PARK.—The short pedigree of this family on p. 77 is wrong in making Clement Acton ancestor of the present Actons of Gatacre.

Thomas Acton (second son of Sir Edward Acton, Bart.) married by licence, dated 10 December, 1601, Mabel, daughter of Clement Skinner, and by her had issue (with others) two sons, Thomas and Clement. The former was father, by Mary his wife, of a son Edward of Gatacre, who, by Anne his wife, had issue three daughters and coheiresses, viz., Mabel m. to Rowland Hill of Hillbeckend, Bewdley, co. Worcester, and ob. s.p.; Frances, bapt. at Claverley 22 April, 1747, m. to Elijah Barrer of Stourbridge; and Mary m. to Peter Hubberley.[1]

Elijah Barrer, who was a glass-maker at Stourbridge, was the son of [1] See an account of the family of Acton of Gatacre, in Foster's "Stemmata Britannica," issued in 1877.

Henry Barrar of Stourbridge, by Carolina his wife née Bachelor, and was bapt. at Oldswinford (Stourbridge), 26 Feb., 1733-4. He died 29 May, 1769 (London Mag.), having had issue by the said Frances[1] his wife (with a daughter Mabel, bapt. at Claverley 29 March, 1769, and married there 4 Dec., 1794, to John Britland Hollings, Esq.), a son Edward Acton Barrar, privately bapt. 20 Dec., 1762, "being then 9 days old," and publicly bapt. at Claverley 30 Jan., 1768 (Claverley Registers). This Mr. E. A. Barrar assumed the surname of Acton, and was father of Edward Farrer Acton of Gatacre, Esq.

Clement Acton, no doubt the younger son of Thomas and Mabel, was an ironmaster at Halesowen. He married Mary, daughter of Gregory Hickman of Stourbridge, and by her had the following issue bapt. at Halesowen :—

1. Edward, s. of Clement and Mary Acton "de la Furnice," bapt. 16 Aug., 1704.
2. Clement, s. of Clement and [blank] Acton "de Furnice," bapt. 18 Feb., 1706-7.
3. Walter, s. of Clement and Mary Acton, Furnice, bapt. 20 March, 1709-10.
4. Mary, d. of Mr. Clement and Mary Acton of the Furnace, bapt. 17 March, 1712-13.
5. James, s. of Mr. Clement and Mary Acton of the Furnace, bapt. 17 Aug. 1715.
6. Mabel, d. of Clement and Mary Acton, bapt. 31 Oct., 1720.

Some of the above probably died young, but they were not buried at Halesowen. Mabel was the fiancée of her kinsman the Rev. Walter Hickman, as appears from the following passage in his will made in 1741 :—"To my dearly beloved kinswoman and betrothed wife, Mary Acton, the younger, of Stourbridge, daughter of Clement Acton, of Hales' Furnace, all my real estate, &c."

Both she and her sister Mabel appear to have died unm., for I find from the Oldswinford[2] parish registers that Mary Acton was buried 1 Dec., 1742, and "Mrs. Mabel Acton" on 26 March, 1772.[3]

In a document of A.D. 1748 I find a "Clement Acton of the Combs, in the parish of Halesowen, Gent.," mentioned. There is no doubt that he was the son so named of Clement and Mary, née Hickman, and the Clement of Halesowen who, your correspondent states, was buried at Tasley 5 Feb., 1764, as of Halesowen. The parish registers of Claverley record the burial on 24 May, 1783, of "Mrs. Jane Acton from Stourbridge," no doubt Clement's widow.

The husband of Frances Whitmore (p. 19) was Thomas Perrott of Bell Hall, Worcestershire, Esq., High Sheriff of that county in 1708. Their eldest son John was bapt. at Claverley 23 Oct, 1704. Mrs. Frances Perrott was buried at Belbroughton, co. Worc., 27 Aug., 1726.

I do not know why your correspondent calls the old seat of the Whitmores "Ludson." Its modern orthography is Ludstone, and I never heard it called by any other name. The old manor house, which is a curious and most interesting old structure, is now the residence of Mr. J. R. Cartwright. A view and description of it has been recently published in Part vii of "The County Seats of Shropshire."

H. Sydney Grazebrook.

[1] Goodwin Zouch and Frances Barrar were married at Claverley 29 April, 1775.

[2] The town of Stourbridge is in the parish of Oldswinford.

[3] Mabel Acton was "of Kinver, spinster," in 1764 ; and in 1779 Jane Bradshaw of Wolverhampton, widow, is described as "sole executrix of the said Mabel Acton, spinster."

Henry Farrer of Stourbridge, by Caroline his wife née Batchelor, and was bapt. at Oldswinford (Stourbridge), 26 Feb., 1723-4. He died 29 May, 1769 (London Mag.), having had issue by the said Francesa his wife (with a daughter Mabel, bapt. at Clavedey 29 March, 1709, and married there 4 Dec., 1734, to John Birkland Hollings, Esq.), a son Edward Acton Farrer, privately bapt. 20 Dec., 1762, "being then 3 days old," and publicly bapt. at Clavedey 30 Jan., 1768 (Clavedey Registers). This Mr. E. A. Farrer assumed the surname of Acton, and was father of Edward Farrer Acton of Gatacre, Esq.

Clement Acton, no doubt the younger son of Thomas and Mabel, was an ironmaster at Halesowen. He married Mary, daughter of Gregory Hickman of Stourbridge, and by her had the following issue bapt. at Halesowen:—

1. Edward, s. of Clement and Mary Acton "de la Furnise," bapt. 16 Aug., 1704.
2. Clement, s. of Clement and (blank) Acton "de Furnise," bapt. 18 Feb., 1706-7.
3. Walter, s. of Clement and Mary Acton, Furnise, bapt. 20 March, 1709-10.
4. Mary, d. of Mr. Clement and Mary Acton of the Furnace, bapt. 17 March, 1712-13.
5. James, s. of Mr. Clement and Mary Acton of the Furnace, bapt. 17 Aug. 1715.
6. Mabel, d. of Clement and Mary Acton, bapt. 31 Oct., 1720.

Some of the above probably died young, but they were not buried at Halesowen. Mabel was the fiancée of her kinsman the Rev. Walter Hickman, as appears from the following passage in his will made in 1741:—"To my dearly beloved kinswoman and betrothed wife, Mary Acton, the younger, of Stourbridge, daughter of Clement Acton, of Hales' Furnace, all my real estate, &c."

Both she and her sister Mabel appear to have died unm., for I find from the Oldswinford[2] parish registers that Mary Acton was buried 1 Dec., 1742, and "Mrs. Mabel Acton" on 26 March, 1772.[3]

In a document of a.d. 1748 I find a "Clement Acton of the Combe, in the parish of Halesowen, Gent.," mentioned. There is no doubt that he was the son so named of Clement and Mary, née Hickman, and the Clement of Halesowen who, your correspondent states, was buried at Tardey 5 Feb., 1761, as of Halesowen. The parish registers of Clavedey record the burial on 24 May, 1783, of "Mrs. Jane Acton from Stourbridge," no doubt Clement's widow.

The husband of Frances Whitmore (p. 19) was Thomas Perrott of Bell Hall, Worcestershire, Esq., High Sheriff of that county in 1708. Their eldest son John was bapt. at Clavedey 23 Oct., 1704. Mrs. Frances Perrott was buried at Bellbroughton, co. Worc., 27 Aug., 1729.

I do not know why your correspondent calls the old seat of the Whitmores "Ludson." Its modern orthography is Ludsden, and I never heard it called by any other name. The old manor house, which is a curious and most interesting old structure, is now the residence of Mr. J. R. Cartwright. A view and description of it has been recently published in Part vii of "The County Seats of Shropshire."

H. Sydney Grazebrook.

[1] Goodwin Zench and Frances Farrer were married at Clavedey 29 April, 1773.
[2] The town of Stourbridge is in the parish of Oldswinford.
[3] Mabel Acton was "of Ninver, spinster," in 1761; and in 1770 Jane Bradshaw of Wolverhampton, widow, is described as "sole executrix of the said Mabel Acton, spinster."

PENNY FAMILY OF SOMERSET AND DORSET.—I should be glad to be directed to a pedigree of this widely distributed family. Hutchins' History of Dorset gives a short one of a family named Penne of Toller Welme; the first on the list being Giles Penne of East Coker, Somerset. The name of this family must have been pronounced Pennè, for inscriptions are extant where the husband is described as George Pennè, and his wife as Jane Penny.

ADMIRAL SIR GEORGE SOMERS—Can any of your readers furnish details of the pedigree of this officer, the discoverer of the Somers Islands, afterwards called Bermudas?

GENEALOGIST,

PENNY FAMILY.—In Sir Bernard Burke's Vicissitudes of Families Vol. 1. p. 3, it states "that among the descendants of Thomas Plantagenet, Duke of Gloucester, we discover Mr. Stephen James Penny, the late sexton of St. George's, Hanover-square."

I understand the Pennys descend from the second marriage of Lucy Holt, the younger daughter snd co-heir of John Mayvett of Norwich, with a John Field of Reading. Can any of the readers of the Genealogist furnish me with particulars of this Penny family, and where they came from? Lucy Holt's first husband was a Thomas Holt of Reading, nephew of Lord Chief Justice Holt, and I presume a daughter by her second husband must have married a Penny.

ENQUIRER, Junior Constitutional Club.

LILLY.—In the Chancery reports, temp Elizabeth, the name of John Lilly of Redditch appears as plaintiff respecting lands which had descended to him from his grandfather. Can anyone refer me to a pedigree showing his descendants at the present time? Also what arms did he bear?

BATES.—Is there any pedigree of the family of William Bates, the celebrated divine, commonly known as "the silver-tongued," and what arms did he bear? On p. 81 I note there is a plaintiff of his name in the Chancery Proceedings, temp. James I. Any information will much oblige.

A. H. BATES.

WILL SEARCHERS WANTED.—I shall be glad to have the names and addresses of competent and reliable Will Searchers at each of the cities and towns where wills are deposited. As many of us want extracts from wills for amateur genealogical purposes where official copies are absolutely needless, such a list as I seek would be of value, and would have been so to myself a few weeks ago.

REGINALD STEWART BODDINGTON.

SIMPSON OF UDOCH, SCOTLAND.—Can anyone give me information concerning this family, whose arms and crest are given in Burke's General Armoury, as Ar. on a chief vert, 3 crescents of the first. Crest—a Falcon volant ppr.
